New York for Smith?
Georgia for Hoover?
$25,000,000 for Rosenwald.
This IS an Empire.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

NEW YORK STATE'S labor union convention indorses Gov. Smith for president, many well known Republicans in union labor ranks leaving their party. This follows a refusal of the national union labor body to take sides in the campaign.

Gov. Smith's friends are forcing the fight in New York state, convinced that if Republicans lose in New York they will lose in the nation.

FROM Georgia, on the other hand, comes M. O. Dunning, said to know politics better than Webster knew spelling. At Montauk, L. I., yesterday Mr. Dunning told Carl Fisher, king of Miami; Mr. Coffin, boss of Hudson and Essex, and this writer, that Herbert Hoover would surely carry Georgia.

He complained that Republican leaders do not see their opportunities in the South, "where," said he, "several states are offered to them on a silver platter."

Results in this campaign will surprise those most deeply interested. Ask Col. Knight, of Tampa.

IT PAYS to stick to your convictions, friends and business.

In 1921 things looked dark for Sears-Roebuck. Shrinkage in after-the-war inventory values threatened to stop preferred dividends. That would have meant nothing to Rosenwald, he could afford to wait.

But friends had bought the stock on his advice, so Mr. Rosenwald put $16,000,000 cash into the company and made it a present of 50,000 shares of its own stock, only reserving the right to buy the stock back at $100 a share.

All went well, the company bought and retired all of its preferred stock out of profits. Rosenwald bought back his 50,000 shares for $5,000,000, and made $25,000,000 cash profit.

MR. ROSENWALD, you will notice, never sells anything short, in this country. He knows that prosperity is only beginning.

Mr. Wall Street Bear, write that on your cuff.

SOME goose says that Mr. Firestone, planting rubber trees in Liberia on a gigantic scale, is "guilty of imperialism," and that Herbert Hoover, as Secretary of Commerce, had a share in that dreadful enterprise.

First, Secretary Kellogg shows that Hoover had nothing to do with the Firestone enterprise.

Second, that's a pity. For Hoover could have helped, and Firestone, planting rubber trees, to fight off the British rubber monopoly, first denounced by Herbert Hoover, renders public service.

Americans not afraid to wander off a few thousand miles to compete in world affairs are needed.

This country is an empire, a big one, and going to be bigger. It needs the sort of men that Britain calls "imperially minded."

REPRESENTATIVES of Russia's government are in America, prepared to spend $40,000,000 for automobile trucks, tractors and other farm machinery.

That should soften our government, which, in silly, provincial fashion, invites all nations EXCEPT Russia, to sign the peace pact.

OUR diplomacy reflects the angry disappointment of foolish bankers that bought Russian bonds, and lost their money. They bought from the Czar and feeble Kerensky, and most of the money stayed HERE to pay American bills.

Modern Russia says "We don't pay the Czar's debts," just as we should have said 150 years ago, "We don't pay King George's debts."

GREEDY, foolish buyers of worthless bonds should not prevent sensible American business men doing business with Russia, or cause Uncle Sam to turn against an old friend. Russian buying here will make up many times over for the foolish bankers' losses on Russian bonds.

As for Russia's kind of government, that is not our business. The British wisely say, "We do business with cannibals."

EIGHTY years ago Francis E. Willard, noble worker for temperance, planted two chestnut trees at Evanston, Ill., saying, "As these trees grow and spread their branches, so the cause of temperance shall grow and spread throughout the world."

Both trees are dying, and the W. C. T. U. has sent for tree surgeons to save them, that they may, in November, post on the trees election returns, "as state after state repudiates the candidate who has declared himself a wet."

If those trees have been "watered" with bootleg whisky, as cynics suggest, the tree surgeons will work in vain.

THE R. E. Jacks Ranch, of San Luis Obispo county, one of the largest in California, will replace many cowboys with one airplane.

The boss cowboy will ride through the air, not far up, supervising herds and spying out fence breaks.

Flying becomes more useful every day, and releasing boys from dull, not at all romantic work, is a blessing.

NEW JERSEY passes sensible uniform traffic laws. Open country speed is increased from 30 to 40 miles an hour. Thirty miles is allowed in regulated city traffic.

And most important, foot traffic must obey traffic signals and cross streets at corners.

This rule, old in California, should be adopted everywhere.

TWO MORE TWINS BURIED

MONESSEN, Pa., Sept. 1.—The skeletons of two more infants, twins, were dug up in the yard of the home of John Hlatky, mill worker, near where the bodies of twins had been found last Tuesday. Hlatky was held on a murder charge by the coroner, and two of his children, Margaret, 14, and Elizabeth, 16, were held as accessories.

It was during a hearing before Alderman F. J. Upton, last night, on a murder charge preferred by state police that an admission is said to have been made by Hlatky that two other bodies had been buried. According to the police, Hlatky said that his wife gave birth to twins in 1926, but that both died shortly afterwards, and that they were buried in the yard. Police immediately went to work in the yard and dug up the skeletons of two infants. Physicians who examined the skeletons could not say whether or not they had been alive when buried. Hlatky and his two daughters were held for trial and will be taken to Greensburg jail today. The wife is in a local hospital and will be arraigned upon her release.

Two Hurt In Auto Crash

Two aged men were injured, one seriously, when the car in which they were driving crashed with another automobile, said to have been driven by a woman, at Bigelow boulevard and Kirkpatrick street, today.

F. W. Hespenheide, 60, of Mars, Pa., suffered a probable fracture of the skull, and his companion, Alfred Duall, 68, of 4612 Liberty avenue, a probable dislocation of the jaw, face and head lacerations.

When the collision occurred, Peggy Blake, 17, of 5631 Rural street, who was driving a short distance behind, leaped from her car, ran to the scene and gave instructions as to the care of the injured men.

Then she aided in carrying Duall into her car and sped through a maze of traffic to West Penn Hospital. Hespenheide was taken to the same hospital by Earl Gosser, of 902 Chamber of Commerce building.

HELEN BENEDICT

If it isn't one beauty contest it's another, as the fellow said. However, when such a winsome miss as Helen Benedict is crowned queen, there does seem some excuse. Helen, 16, of 428 Lamar street, Wilkinsburg, a sophomore at Wilkinsburg High, is Miss Pennsylvania, according to the terms of a beauty contest held at Conneaut Lake.

5 SEIZED AS BANDITS FACE DAPPER QUIZ

Believing that the five alleged holdup men arrested in Washington county yesterday by city automobile detectives may have some knowledge of the murder of Dr. Harry Dapper, of Carrick, city detectives will question them concerning their activities at the time of the crime.

Lieut. Edward O'Rourke, head of the automobile squad who brought about their arrest, will conduct the questioning.

MURREN TAKES CHARGE

With the return of Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren from his vacation today, a new inquiry was started in the case.

Murren conferred with Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park, County Detective Harry Cochran, acting chief during Murren's absence, and others familiar with the circumstances of the crime. Following the conference it was announced that Murren would have charge of the investigation.

A reward of $5,000 for the murderer's capture should be offered by the county, according to Commissioner C. C. McGovern. He said

SHIP AFIRE 5,000 FT. UP, THAW SAVED

PAMONA, Cal., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Col. William Thaw, II, World War pilot, and his flying partner, Capt. John P. Morris, both of Pittsburgh, yesterday unintentionally exhibited their air skill by diving and landing their burning plane from a 5,000-foot altitude.

The pilots, after taking off from March Field, Riverside, on a hop to San Diego, were almost directly above the Kellogg airport near here, when suddenly flames leaped from the engine.

Their quick drop and landing was accomplished, they explained, by allowing the plane to fall a good distance from a "still" and then catching it with a "glide."

Col. Thaw and Capt. Morris are entered together in the National Transcontinental air race from New York to Los Angeles.

LAY DEATH THREAT TO LOITERER IN PARK

Enmeshed in a chain of circumstantial evidence, William Beatty, 43, of Courtright street, was held for court today on charges of attempted extortion in sending threatening letters to Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, of 1165 Beechwood boulevard, and to Albert Mansmann, of 716 North Negley avenue. Bail was fixed at $5,000.

It was shown in the testimony that Beatty had visited Highland Park almost daily from August 7 to August 25, embracing the period when the writer of the letters had demanded that $5,000 be buried in the ground near the sixth light pole on the park driveway. Beatty lives in the Perrysville avenue district on the North Side. He admitted that he had gone across town to loiter in Highland Park.

Knifed to Death at Dance

Stabbed in the heart, Louis Matte, 36, of McDonald, was found dead in the yard of the North Fayette township school early today. Accused of the stabbing, Frank Bolind, 17, of R. F. D. No. 1 Imperial, is being held in the McDonald Police Station. Two others are in custody of the police as material witnesses.

McDonald police say that both men had attended a dance in the schoolhouse Friday night. An argument arose and the two, with several companions, went to the school yard where a free-for-all fight occurred.

When Matte fell fatally stabbed, the participants scattered and it was not until other persons leaving the hall found the body, that police were called.

A roundup of the witnesses resulted in the arrest of Bolind, his brother Lawrence, 19, and Thomas Falin, 30, of McDonald, who are held as witnesses. Falin suffered a slight stab wound in the arm, police say.

Only six more contests are on the season's card at the Oakland orchard. Labor Day fights with the Cubs are on the bills for Monday, with a single contest scheduled for Tuesday.

After these contests are finished, the Buccos will invade St. Louis for four games.

The Pirates will place their dependence in Carmen Hill in the last game, while Bill Sherdel is due to heckle the Buccos from Fogarty Knoll.

The Oaklanders are in undisputed possession of fourth place and are ready to knock the Giants off the third-place perch.

Ellwood Awaits Pirate Ghosts' Visit

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., Sept. 1.—Ghosts are expected to walk here tonight. Many credulous persons will be on the lookout for the shades of two Spanish pirates who, according to a local legend, return annually on the night of September 1 to view the spot where they had buried their treasure and lost their lives. How the seabooters came so far inland is not explained, but a big crowd will watch for the ghosts just the same.

GENE AND POLLY TO WAIT TILL CHAMP IS CROWNED

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—A copyright dispatch from South Bristol, Me., in the Daily News today quotes Miss Polly Lauder as indicating the possibility that her marriage to Gene Tunney will not take place until a successor has won the heavyweight title relinquished by the champion.

"It is our belief," the News quotes her, "that as soon as Gene is really rid of the boxing title he will be quickly forgotten. As soon as a new champion is crowned, the masses will forget the old one.

"Then we can marry and live in peace. When the ceremony is performed, and we are not decided as to that yet, it shall be done as quietly as possible."

Miss Lauder denied she would soon join Tunney in Europe for a wedding in Paris.

The ex-champion's fiancee said she knew nothing of Tunney's activities abroad. Gene has not written her, she said, since he sailed, two weeks ago.

"Since Mr. Tunney has scarcely been gone long enough for me to receive a letter here," she said, "I have no idea what is going on over there. We have received several cable messages from him, but they are always addressed to all at home. I certainly am anxiously awaiting a letter."

Miss Lauder is wearing an engagement ring, which she described as "charming." The ring consists of a square-cut diamond, about a half-inch in diameter, in a Lacy platinum setting, inlaid with smaller diamonds. The circlet of the ring is also of platinum, set with smaller stones.

AMELIA AWAITS NEW PLANE HERE

Miss Amelia Earhart, first woman to cross the Atlantic by airplane, will fly away from Pittsburgh late this afternoon or tomorrow morning in a new English plane which she recently purchased in New York. It is being flown here today.

The plane, similar to that in which Miss Earhart cracked up at Rodgers Field late yesterday, is expected to land at the field at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The wrecked plane, she said, probably will be shipped back to New York for repairs.

STRIKES DITCH

Miss Earhart struck a ditch in landing at Rodgers Field, completely wrecking the landing gear, breaking the propeller and badly damaging both lower wings of the plane. Neither she nor George Palmer Putnam, publisher, accompanying her from New York as a passenger, was injured.

Miss Earhart will continue along her "flying vacation" which brought her to Pittsburgh. Mr. Putnam said he likely would return to New York tonight by train.

Miss Earhart had not decided today where she would go from Pittsburgh, but intimated that she might fly to Cleveland.

"Just flying around," she said.

The plane in which she crashed, an English Avero-Avian, formerly was owned by Lady Frances Heath, who flew it from London to South Africa. It was presented to Miss Earhart in London after her spectacular flight there.

Mr. Putnam, head of G. P. Putnam's Sons, is bringing out Miss Earhart's book, containing her experiences in the trans-Atlantic flight. The book will be off the press within 10 days, he said.

The plane of the Boston social worker, who attained international fame by her flight across the 1,900-mile expanse of North Atlantic waters, smashed and skidded as she landed when the wheels of her plane struck an unnoticed ditch separating Rodgers Field from the 42-acre tract of land belonging to Allegheny county. She was heartbroken.

"After 10 years' flying—" she said, almost in tears.

"I can't say much for Pittsburgh's air fields," angrily exclaimed Putnam.

"How," he asked, "did the newspapers learn we were coming, anyway?" They then excused themselves to communicate with friends by long distance telephone.

Mr. Putnam learned then that it's hard to keep out of the light when traveling with a celebrity. Photographers snapped right and left.

"We are not here on business," Putnam declared. "Miss Earhart has been working awfully hard for the last month. She needed to take a flying trip to rest up. I came along as passenger. We had no plans beyond Pittsburgh. Just flying around."

"I might have stayed here for two weeks," Miss Earhart added, "but now I want to get away just as soon as we can get the plane fixed."

Taxicab "Steerer" Fined

So furious did Magistrate A. D. Brandon pound his desk in Morals Court today that the head broke off his gavel and struck Miss Catherine Dore, welfare worker of the Catholic Charities, on the head.

Apparently Miss Dore was not badly hurt and Brandon hastily made an apology. The gavel is a large teakwood mallet.

Brandon's outburst was caused by the admission of a taxicab driver that he had received $1 a head from the keeper of an alleged resort for every passenger he took to her place.

Declaring that he would break up the practice, the magistrate imposed a fine of $100 on Carl Burkhart, of 350 Beech street, the cab driver.

Ruth Eathey, 22, 735 East Ohio street, arrested on the charge of keeping a disorderly house, was ordered to pay a fine of $100, and her sister, Elizabeth, 21, a visitor, was ordered to pay $50.

HOOVER GAINS IN STATE POLL, CUT SMITH LEAD TO

Herbert Hoover draws close to a tie with Gov. Alfred E. Smith through the latest returns in the straw vote canvass of Pennsylvania by the Sun-Telegraph.

The ballots received for the day strongly favored the Republican candidate and almost overcame the lead of the Democratic standard bearer. Hoover's advantage in the returns was nearly 100 and reduced Smith to a majority of 9 out of about 8,300 votes cast.

Hoover not only maintained his strength in the rural districts but easily won in the large vote registered from Philadelpria. The rural returns constitpted a small percentage of the daily total, the bulk of the vote coming from the first city. Only a few ballots were received from suburban communities.

Early returns from Philadelphia showed Smith a strong favorite, but the Hoover strength in the city gradually increased in later returns.

His strength among women voters likewise grew stronger, a good majority favoring him in the later ballots, with a large number of women recording their sentiments.

The totals in the Pennsylvania poll, part of the national canvass by the Hearst papers, stand as follows: Smith 4,142, including 2,498 men and 1,644 women; Hoover 4,133, including 2,506 men and 1,627 women. In the 1924 these electors voted as follows: Coolidge 5,352, including 3,104 men and 2,248 women; Davis 559, including 379 men and 180 women; LaFollette 941.

LAND FRAUD SUIT STOPS AIMEE'S TOUR

NOTIFIED SHE MUST STAND TRIAL

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Investigation of her alleged fraudulent real estate transactions at Lake Tahoe, a southern California summer resort, today caused Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, "foursquare gospel" evangelist, to postpone a missionary trip to Europe.

Mrs. McPherson had planned to leave Los Angeles next Monday but was notified by the county prosecutor's office that she must remain in California until the case is disposed of.

The grand jury was ordered yesterday to conduct the inquiry into the alleged sale of land made to members of the evangelist's flock on the promise that a religious colony would be established at the resort. Investors who filed two civil suits to recover the purchase price, when it appeared the colony would not be established, yesterday demanded of the district attorney that he issue a criminal complaint against her. Counsel for the complainants obtained a court order directing her to appear in court to make deposition.

The grand jury investigations are not connected with Mrs. McPherson. Once believed under she had disappeared in the surf of a nearby beach and was picked up in the Mexican desert several weeks later—she was called before the county grand jury investigating charges of kidnaping and escape. The kidnaping charges against her were dropped after a lengthy hearing.

present a resolution for such trial at the next meeting of the county commissioners. Several years ago McGovern presented a bill providing for the establishment of a standing reward of $5,000 in murder cases but the resolution was never acted on.

The prisoners arrested by detectives were taken into custody at the lodge at Chambers Dam, near Washington. They are Harold Phillips, 22, of Altoona; Fred Prezio, 33, of 1225 Epiphany street; John Furley, 24, of Furley street; Robert Smith, 24, of Baldwin street, Etna, and Ralph Nicksick, 20, of Library road, Overbrook. Detectives say they wish to question the five concerning numerous holdups.

The men had, detectives say, an automobile similar to the one in which the slayer of Dr. Dapper escaped. The county sleuths who have been working on the case will have an opportunity to talk to the prisoners today. Persons who saw the slayer at the physician's office also will be asked to view the prisoners today in an effort to identify one of them.

It developed today that Prezio is under indictment by the grand jury for carrying concealed weapons and previous mischief following his arrest by Chief of Police Charles C. Erwin, of Mt. Lebanon. He is alleged to have had dynamite in his possession and attempted to wreck the home of John Roaper, 223 Fernleaf avenue, Mt. Lebanon. He was released on bail for trial in Criminal Court this month.

Detectives arranged to have a "stand-up" of the members of the gang this afternoon when victims of numerous holdup cases will be asked to try to identify the men.

BOY'S DARE LEADS TO DEATH

A game of follow-the-leader ended tragically last night for John Barnachy, 16, of 304 Laurel way, Homestead, who, while leading several companions, slipped from the north end rail of Brown's Bridge, fell into the Monongahela River, and drowned. His body was recovered by George Palmer, life guard at the Homestead pool.

Witnesses told police that Barnachy and several companions, whose names were not learned, were playing the game when Barnachy climbed over the railing. He lost his grip and slipped into the stream before his pals could follow him. The body was removed to a Homestead undertaking establishment.

believe that all these suspicious circumstances do not center around these letters," said Magistrate John Orie in ordering Beatty held for the grand jury.

Lieut. David Corbett of the homicide squad testified that the letters had been mailed August 7, and when they were turned over to the detectives the spot in the park had been shadowed. Beatty, he said, went to the park daily and spent his time within 150 feet of the light pole or within view of the place where the money was to be deposited.

Frank Walter, of 3909 Howley street, foreman in the park, testified that Beatty had suddenly appeared before him, coming apparently through a thicket and up a steep hillside hen it would have been more convenient to walk around a bridle path.

The spot he said was near the sixth light pole. Other detectives testified that Beatty had loitered near the spot and that footprints found in the vicinity matched Beatty's shoes.

WRITINGS ALIKE

Lieut. Corbett testified he had dictated the letters to the suspect and had asked him to print the text with a lead pencil. The writing was offered in evidence and Magistrate Orie said that the form of the letter "L" and other characteristics of Beatty's writing were similar to those of the writer of the original letters.

Beatty, testifying in his own defense, admitted that he had made visits to the park and said that he had been reading. He explained that he had happened to be near the light poles while talking to a park lamp-lighter.

According to Lieut. Thomas Malone numerous other letters have been received by persons residing in the East End. Most of the letters were turned over to detectives who now are attempting to prove that Beatty sent them all. The letter to Mrs. Thaw demanded that $5,000 be placed near a light at the entrance to Highland Park and threatened injury to her son, Harry K. Thaw, unless the money were delivered as ordered.

SAW GANG KILL, SAYS GIRL

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 1. — (AP.) — Jennie Brooks, 16-year-old gang girl now under arrest, in the room when Daniel Joseph O'Leary, reputed hijacker and gunman, was killed by five men, has told her story.

The climax, delivered with a high sense of drama, in her own words was:

"It was the hiss of death. They were pumping bullets into Dan's body with one of those silent guns. They had followed us from Jersey."

It was not until detectives had discovered that the girl was a runaway wife and that her name was Mrs. Anna Pechler Marcello, that they managed to break her silence and obtain from her a narrative, which, while dramatic, was lacking in substantial information regarding the crime.

WARNED OF DANGER

She told the police:

"On the night of the murder Danny had an idea he wanted to go over to the Ringside Inn, a place near Blackwood, N. J.

"Outside the house he ran into Francis Peterson and Shorty Feldman (both now under arrest). They told him he was in danger of being bumped off for the killing of Hugh McLoon. They told him not to go over to Jersey.

After they had returned home from the roadhouse — probably trailed—and "Danny" had been carried to bed by the taxi driver, the girl went on:

"I judge we were asleep about one-half to three-quarters of an hour when I was awakened," she said. "I just can't remember whether someone pulled my arm or whether it was the steady glare of a flashlight.

"Before I could speak, I heard a voice and I saw a man's eyes under a cap. Suddenly there was the strangest hissing sound—sist-sist-sist-sist five times, just like that and no louder.

"It was the hiss of death. I didn't know it then, but I soon discovered they were pumping bullets into Dan's body with one of those silent guns.

"Every time the thing hissed it spat a blue flame.

"The man seemed to ignore me. I was at first inclined to scream, but something prevented me. I guess I was so startled.

"I waited until I felt sure they had gone. I jumped up and turned on the light and rushed over and shook Dan's shoulder. This caused the blood to flow from his wounds.

"I screamed when I looked down and saw my hands were covered with blood. You see, I really loved Danny and I feel sure he loved me.

"After putting on some clothes I ran to the street to telephone police.

Mix Freed In Hitting Actor

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Tom Mix, screen cowboy and former Texas Ranger, today stood vindicated by the court for using his fists to reply to the "wise cracks" of Will Morrissey, stage comedian, about the future of the silent Tom and his horse Tony in the talking movies.

Mix was acquitted in Municipal Court yesterday after the judge had declared that Mix had acted only as "any prudent, red-blooded man" would act in the battle early one Sunday morning at the end of a party.

Summing up, Judge Leonard Wilson concluded that both Morrissey and his wife, Midgie Miller, were intoxicated; that the comedian provoked Mix and that Mix had a right to defend himself.

Morrissey and his wife were emphatic in declaring Mix had landed many well-aimed blows and followed them with kicks after the stage actor went down.

WIFE BEATEN WITH CHISEL; SEEK MATE

Police are looking for A. Z. Hughes, 50, of 1306 Faulsey way, North Side, charged with having assaulted his wife, Clara, with a chisel, inflicting a deep wound in her head. Mrs. Hughes is at the Presbyterian Hospital. She told police that her husband struck her following an argument and fled from the house, leaving her unconscious.

WISCONSIN HOT RACE CLOSES

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—A governor seeking the customary second term, the LaFollette faction attempting a comeback, and a millionaire manufacturer making his debut as a public office seeker, form the central features of the political picture in the state's primary campaign closing today.

From the three men in that picture, the Republican voters will select a nominee who probably will be the next governor of Wisconsin. The likelihood that the successful aspirant for the Republican nomination will be the next chief executive is based upon the 34 years' unbroken reign of that party.

NOMINATIONS TUESDAY

Nominations for state, legislative and congressional offices will be made next Tuesday by both Democratic and Republican parties, but the interest is focused upon the outcome of the struggle for the gubernatorial nomination.

In the triangular contest, Fred R. Zimmerman is the governor seeking re-election, an indorsement not denied a Governor of Wisconsin in 33 years. Opposing him are Congressman Joseph D. Beck, with whom the LaFollete Progressives are attempting to regain control of the state administration after suffering a setback two years ago at the hands of Zimmerman, and also Walter J. Kohler, the political novice. Kohler, manufacturer and founder of the village which bears his name, was projected into the gubernatorial fight as the hope of the anti-Progressive element.

Forced into the background by the intensity of the fight for Governor is the race for United States Senator, in which Robert M. LaFollette, son of the independent candidate for President four years ago, is seeking a full term, after serving the three years that remained at his father's death in 1925.

The Golden Rule Reigns! -:- Vacation Days are Over! -:- School Bells Tuesday

BE SEATED, CHILDREN

Those "dear old golden rule days" (Remember the song?) approaching speedily. And that means the end of a happy summer vacation for thousands of boys and girls. It means to Sportino (above) that he can't demonstrate how puck should be played to Bernie Massullo, Frank Greco, Mike Spezzano, Domi Greco and Marino Morelli.

THE GENERALISSIMO

To Jack Kirby, building superintendent of the Hancock school, the school opening next Tuesday means scores of beautiful girls and handsome boys (an even division of bouquets) entrusted to his care. And conditions must be conducive to study, musn't they?

A'S AND B'S

Some of our pupils don't wait until the first bell rings to open their books. Marcella Hallisey, for instance, sits in her Beltzhoover avenue home these days anticipating just what the lessons will be. That may be why Marcella's report fairly scintillates.

POTENTIAL HONOR STUDENTS

Some of us are too old to pay much attention to the a-b-c's. Others are not quite ready to assimilate the learning involved in spelling cat, to say naught of dog. But these three young 'uns, snapped unbeknownest to them, are eager to gain admission to Hancock School.

HIS PREPARATION

It wouldn't be fair to present a young lady as she sits poised with a willing pencil and ignore a young man's efforts in a similar direction. Ernest D'Alessandro (above) is the young man. Is he preparing for school next week? Or is he just curled up with a good book?

Solons at Funeral :-: Of Senator Pfischner :-: In Millvale

FLORAL TRIBUTES

Many beautiful flowers were laid at the bier of Senator Edward Pfischner, youngest member of the State Senate, who was buried yesterday in Mt. Royal Cemetery. The floral tributes sent by hundreds of friends and political associates were too numerous to be cared for in the house and they were placed on the grounds of his late home, prior to being taken to the cemetery.

SENATE CLERK

John E. McKirdy, clerk of the Senate, led the party of Senators who attended the funeral of their colleague. The entire senatorial membership had been designated as a committee of honor to attend the funeral.

HONOR DEAD COMRADE

Some of the 49 state Senators who attended the funeral yesterday. They are seen leaving the home of Senator Pfischner in Millvale en route to the cemetery. The members attended in one large committee designated by Senator Horace W. Schantz, of Lehigh county, president pro tem. A. Boyd Hamilton, secretary of the Senate, is on the right of the first couple in line. Many local politicians and other personal friends also attended the funeral.

CHIEF MOURNER

Mrs. Pfischner is being led to an automobile en route to the cemetery. Services were conducted in the home at 2:30 o'clock and interment followed an hour later. The Rev. George Rowe, of the Millvale Methodist Episcopal Church, conducted the services.

CLERGYMEN

The Rev. George Hall (right), chaplain of the Senate, and the Rev. Dr. Rowe. Dr. Rowe was in charge of the services and was assisted by Dr. Hall. Senator Pfischner died Tuesday in a hospital where he was rushed a few days previously after having been stricken suddenly in a downtown office. The young senator was but 29 years old.

16 INJURED IN CRASH ON N. Y. ELEVATED

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Sixteen persons were injured and the terror of another transit wreck gripped 100 others who escaped early today when a northbound 10-car Interborough train crashed into a work train in the Bronx, where the line is elevated.

There was a derailment. Steel coming in contact with the third rail sent great electric flashes into the air, and the 75 passengers on the train became panic-stricken, recalling the crash a week ago last night in which 17 persons were killed underneath Times Square.

The accident early this morning was of no serious consequence. The work train was operating on a middle track and the northbound passenger train was on an outer track.

The work train was being switched from the northbound track to the center storage track when the crash occurred.

The two trains went into a side collision, telescoping the front car of the passenger train with the rear, or service, car of the work train and lifting both from the track.

They passed at a curve and the eighth car of the passenger train struck the box car that headed the four-car work train. Glass was shattered, one car of the passenger train was derailed, and four men injured.

Hugh McDeavitt, motorman of the work train, suffered internal injuries and Samuel Lilienthal suffered bruises. Both were taken to the Lincoln Hospital. James R. Cuff and Herbert Schneidermann were cut by flying glass, treated, and then sent to their homes.

Fourteen other persons were treated at the same hospital. Many were suffering from hysteria, but after treatment all were sent home.

The nerves of the 75 passengers on the train gave way after they heard the booming thud of the crash, the splintering glass, saw the sparks flying from the rail and then watched the train lights go out.

A panic ensued. Several women on the train were reported to have fainted. Men rushed to the doors, shouting:

"Open the doors! Open the doors!"

RASKOB PASSES THROUGH CITY

Chairman John J. Raskob of the Democratic National Committe was in Pittsburgh early today for a short time while the train to which his private car was attached stopped in the Pennsylvania Railriad Station to change engines. Raskob, with H. H. Lehman, financial adviser of the national committee and Senator Peter G. Gerry of the advisory committee, were en route to New York from Columbus, where they conferred last night with state leaders. The car was attached to the Spirit of St. Louis train which stopped for five minutes at 4:27 a. m.

MOODY'S GRANDCHILD TO WED PEACE LEADER

EAST NORTHFIELD, Mass., Sept. 1.—(A.P.)—A granddaughter of the late Dwight L. Moody, educator and evangelist, is to marry a scholar. Miss Mary Whittle Moody is engaged to Arthur Worthington Packard, of Boston, who made Phi Beta Kappa at Brown and was graduated magna cum laude. He also was a swimmer and a track athlete. He is to be field secretary of the World Peace Foundation.

Smithites Break Up Meeting

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—The Smith and anti-Smith lines in this southern capital city were fairly well drawn today as the result of an egg-throwing, free-for-all fighting exhibition which threw the first meeting of the Hoover Democratic Club of Richland county into disorder last night.

The whole business appears to have ended in a draw, although the Smith men claimed the distinction, at least, of having invaded an unfriendly meeting and succeeded in getting one of their number to make a speech for the New York governor.

HECKLING VIOLENT

Both that speech and several attacking Gov. Smith were accompanied by so much heckling that it was at times difficult to hear the orators, and a resolution to call a meeting on Septemer 25 of true "Jeffersonian Democrats" was punctuated with so much caterwauling that no one could say whether it had been adopted or voted down.

The high light of the evening came about when the owner of a bag of eggs got into a rough and tumble during which the bag was crushed.

One egg remained intact, however, and this the owner seized and pitched at the head of one of his opponents. It landed squarely and the fighting commenced.

For several minutes the free-for-all continued while a group stood on benches and cheered.

2 SPEAKERS HEARD

Finally restoring order, the crowd listened to George W. Beckett, a Smith bolter, make a speech. Promptly half of the audience left the hall and a part of the group remaining demanded a speech from R. Charlton Wright, editor of the Columbia Record, who responded with an address for Smith. Both Wright and Beckett were heckled.

HUGE SUM PAID POLIC PHILA. JURY FINDS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—The finding by a grand jury that police are on the payrolls of bootleggers and have received hundreds of thousands of dollars, perhaps millions, in bribes caused a stir today.

The jury's report says also that liquor interests have been protected for years by an alliance of police and "misguided" politicians, and that the menace of gunmen and gangsters threatens to make this city a second Chicago, with target practice held in the streets and human beings the targets.

The grand jury was called two weeks ago to investigate gang murders, bootlegging and other underworld activities.

Judge Edwin O. Lewis, after reading the report, granted the jury's request to continue its investigation.

BREAK RING, SAYS JUDGE

Rum rings must be broken up, he said in addressing the jurors, and their trail of murders and corruption eliminated.

If the police department is not purged, he said, by the proper city officials and the Civil Service Commission, he will appoint a commission under the city charter that will have power to subpena any witness, no matter what his station, to testify.

"I will do this," Judge Lewis said, "if it takes the commission years to complete the task, and if it necessitates the use of the most extraordinary methods ever evolved to combat crime here.

"I have information that gunmen have been hired in the business world of our city. They have been brought here to carry on trade rivalry—the blowing up of business houses, the assassination of business rivals.

"They do it in Chicago and St. Louis. Now they are trying to do it here, but we are not going to let them.

"The Civil Service Commission has the power to find out how many motorcars every policeman has, how many diamond rings, the lavish scale he lives on, the money he has and to find out if he is taking graft."

"ONLY A START"

The disclosures, District Attorney John Monaghan said, were only "a scratch on the surface" of what further investigation of the seized books of Marks, Weinberg & Co., public accountants, would reveal. Thus far his information concerned a single Philadelphia alcohol plant.

"It would appear from this record," he said, "that these people over a period of five months paid $29,400 to persons designated 'cops.'"

"Individual entries were there also. One sum of $10,000 was charged this way: 'Chief Cop, $10,000,' under this was the full name of a high police official. After this was another, '$800 per month,' then others.

The grand jury, which will recess over Labor Day, reported that the information it had gathered from 40 witnesses was "amazing in its character and almost unbelievable in its significance."

ELLWOOD CITY KEEPS FAST TIME FOR MONTH

ELLWOOD, CITY, Pa., Sept. 1.—With neighboring towns going back to standard time on Labor Day, Ellwood City, will continue on day light saving time, until the last of the month.

SHOTS IN BACK END GRUDGE; KILLED IN LUNCH BAR GROUP

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Five shots fired through the half-opened door of a downtown lunchroom last night killed James (Lefty) Doyle as he sat at the counter among 18 other patrons of the place. The slayer escaped.

Doyle, police said, served a year in prison in 1914 for assault, and was sentenced again for petit larceny in 1916.

They believed his slaying was a "grudge" affair, since none of the others in the restaurant was fired upon and no attempt was made to rob the place.

TWO BOYS HELD IN DEATH OF THIRD IN ROCK FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 1.—Charles Shapoczko, 7, and William Chatko, 6, are being held in the juvenile detention rooms here following the finding of the body of their playmate, Raymond Whigham, 6, in the Monongahela River at California yesterday.

The three boys had been playing along the river bank together last Wednesday, and an argument arose about where they would go swimming, according to County Detective William Dinsmore. One of the boys threw a stone and charles and William found themselves pitched against Raymond in an old-fashioned "rock fight." One of the stones struck Raymond on the head and he fell unconscious on the water's edge. His companions fled, and a wave from a passing steamboat carried Raymond into the stream.

An autopsy was performed last night in an effort to determine whether the boy met death by drowning or the blow on the head.

Mother Killed in Leap From Car To Save Child

NICHOLVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 1. (AP.)—Mrs. Margaret Salisbury, 38, of Watertown, wife of an engineer in the New York State Highway Department, was killed here yesterday when she leaped from an automobile in which she was riding with her husband.

Her 3-year-old daughter, Margaret, seated on the floor in the rear of the car, had opened the door, falling out, and Mrs. Salisbury, terror stricken, had jumped from the car before it could be stopped. The child escaped injury.

THEY HELPED

MORE AND MORE RELIEF

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Milk and Ice Fund grows to a stage where genuine relief for more than a few can be distributed. The contributors include Dickie and Jimmie McGarvey (above), of Phillips avenue. They sold home-made root beer to raise $2.25.

ROOT BEER SALESMAN

FROM SOUTH AIKEN

Things wouldn't be just right if the youngger citizenry of South Aiken avenue weren't represented. So Raymond Hepner and Earl Pearlman obtained recognition for the East End thoroughfare by getting together $2 and adding it to the fund.

ANNUAL CONTRIBUTORS

PERMANENT HELPERS

In Manning street they give an annual benefit for the fund. This year they realized $18.50—all for the babies! The promoters were Virginia Carr, Elizabeth Nossek, Grace Boeggeman, Alice Hagedorn with little Margaret Nossek, Mary Louise Beamer, Evelyn Hagedorn, Dorothy Reynolds, Lucy Matchett, Ruth Hagedorn and Colette Boeggeman.

HOUSE TO HOUSE

ENTERPRISING

The fund was enriched $8.33 because these four youngsters were enterprising enough to sell candy in a house-to-house canvass in the Shady avenue district. They're Annette Robin and the three Kalish sisters, Jeanne, Betty and "Babs."

STAGE AND SCREEN ACTIVITIES DETAILED IN PICTURES AND GOSSIP ABOUT PLAYERS

Marian Nixon May Be Heroine In Drama, "She Goes to War," Which Henry King Will Direct

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 1.

DIRECTOR HENRY KING has the reputation of dwaddling along for several weeks prior to the start of his picture, and then suddenly snapping into it with a sharp precision that is amazing. Here it is, almost time for him to begin "She Goes to War," and so far the only persons assigned to parts are Gertrude Astor and Ivan Lebedeff. Meantime, King is dreaming along at his seashore home in Malibou without an apparent care in the world. However, if I judge correctly he has everything all set in his mind, and within the next few days will announce that Marian Nixon will portray the leading feminine role in the film, while Clifford Holland will be his choice for the principal male part. If my prophecy regarding these two people proves correct, they are very much to be congratulated. The story with which King will work has strength and color. The director is greatly enthused over it, and the smart folk in the industry are whispering that King is just about due for another really great picture. And a combination of such fortuitous circumstances generally results in fame for the stars.

In telling of "The Godless Girl" mier, there was no mention of fact that the film has been synonized for sound. A stupid overt, indeed, in these days of sound eria. In the latest De Mille odrama the sound effects inthe wailing of police sirens, shrill tooting of a whistle which fies the countryside of an escape the reform school, the ringing ongs and bells, the hissing of a stream of water from a hose, and the crackling of fire. The sound did not match with the picture of the steam whistle or the gongs or the bells. In one place the sounds were audible in the distance while bloodhounds in the foreground obviously bayed in silence. In the sequence depicting the destruction by fire of the reform school, the crackling noise of the flames heightened the illusion. But this is a desperately long sequence, and before it ends the incessant racket rasps on the nerves. Thus far I haven't seen a photoplay benefited by sound effects, except in spots that were few and far between.

An interesting story comes about S. S. Van Dine, the writer. Just why there should be any mystery regarding the identity of the gentleman using this pen name is beyond me, but at any rate let's dispell it by saying that he is Willard Huntington Wright. The story is that the author has determined to write six of his celebrated murder yarns, and when this is accomplished he will commit a sort of murder himself by slaying S. S. Van Dine. The titles of three of his mystery stories are "The Benson Murder," "The Green Murder" and "The Bishop Murder."

Now that we've had "Lilac Time" and nearly every other sort of time in the movies, it seems to be murder time. All sorts of mystery dramas are in the making at the studios. "Seven Footprints to Satan" is one of them, and "Sh! the Octopus!" is another. Looks like we're in for a shivery cinema season.

Director George Fitzmaurice agrees with Herbert Brenon that studio sets just can't compare with original locations. Which makes it very nice indeed, especially when the story deals with action in some agreeable country reached in an agreeable manner. All of which is merely preface to the news that Fitzmaurice and the "Changeling" company will sail this month for the well-known South Seas. Milton Sills is this time a cop who gets his . . . woman. Dorothy Mackaill is the suspected criminal whom he pursues. Incidentally, the shift of Sills from "The Comedy of Life" to "Changeling" deprived Maria Corda of the chance to be his leading woman. Another tough break for Maria, and I hear she feels pretty badly about it. Sills will do "Life" next. Maybe Maria's luck will change.

ONE ROMANCE :-: AFTER ANOTHER :-: FOR THESE STARS

Life is just a round of romances—r stly on the screen—for the movie stars. Here Adolphe Menjou, who, with his bride, Kathryn Carver, will do a film, "His Private Life."

Fay Wray is to help with the romance in the screen's latest version of "Four Feathers," the story that Richard Barthelmess once made under the title of "The White Black Sheep." Gary Cooper is to be Fay's hero.

Constance Talmadge is going to do her latest screen romancing in Europe. She is en route to Nice to make a United Artist picture at the Ingram studio there. The film title is being kept a secret.

Ronald Colman, so 'tis said, has ambitions to play the romantic Sidney Carton in the "Tale of Two Cities." And there are rumors from the movie capital that maybe Ronald will get his wish.

SUE INSPECTOR FOR ATTACK

Mrs. Bertha Bernot and her husband, Joseph, 105 Wilmont street, Duquesne, ask $25,000 damages from Carl Goldstrohm, said to be a sanitary inspector at Duquesne, who, it is alleged, struck Mrs. Bernot several times on August 6 when she refused him admittance to the home.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Strangler Lewis, back from Germany with a paunch, intends to work it off in the Canadian wilds. He attributes it to German beer and expects to avoid the Canadian brand.

All-Talkies Mark Opening in Aldine

Loew's Aldine, one of Pittsburgh's oldest theaters, bears the distinction of being the home of many theatrical innovations and changes that have occurred in local amusement circles over the years. It was the first theater in this city to combine the big stage presentations with motion pictures five years ago when Lou Sidney, then its managing director and now one of the high officials of the Loew organization introduced that form of entertainment to Pittsburgh.

Re-opening on Monday, Labor Day, the Aldine again will distinguish itself as the first theater in the city to show an entire and exclusive program of sound and talking pictures. The opening program will be made up entirely of Movietone features and novelties. The main attraction, "Street Angel," will be screened with its story heightened by sound effects and musical accompaniment. Pittsburgh's first seeing and hearing of a movie news reel will be in the Aldine, also. It will be the Fox-Movietone News.

LABOR DAY IN THEATERS

Hal Skelley and Barbara Stanwick are featured players in the Arthur Hopkins comedy "Burlesque" which opens the regular season in the Alvin Monday. The cast includes Laura Hamilton, Charles D. Brown, Ralph Theadore, Paul Porter, Barbara Robins, Oscar Levant, Joseph Burton and Jack Shea.

The final week of the current season of the George Sharp Players will open on Monday in the Pitt. The production will be "Nightie Night," a comedy. There will be a matinee Monday.

Cross word puzzle fans will find the solution of many knotty words in "Simba," which opens Monday with a matinee in the Nixon. For instance, this picture of jungle life affords a fine glimpse of that three letter African antelope—the G-N-U.

Singing by Mildred Franklin and dancing by Ida Shaw will be features of "Hello Paree," coming burlesque attraction in the Academy.

"Midgetland," presenting a group of midgets in a series of specialty acts, will top the bill in the Sheridan Square Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

The headline act in the Harris the first three days of next week will be a comedy sketch, "Battling Terry."

The Penn will observe its first anniversary week, beginning Monday. Marion Davies' "The Cardboard Lover" and a stage revue will be the features.

Warming Up," a baseball drama starring Richard Dix, will be next week's photoplay in the Stanley.

The Emil Jannings' picture, "The Sreet of Sin," will open Monday in the Grand and Liberty.

"The Street Angel," a talking film will open the Aldine season Labor Day. Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor are the featured players.

"Lilac Time," starring Colleen Moore opens a week's engagement in the Regent today. There will be a midnight show tomorrow night.

Laughs as Well As Thrills in Jungles

Hunting big game with a camera has its laughs as well as its thrills and dangers. This is said to be proven by experiences of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, who, after four years in the African jungles, brought back the picture, "Simba," which opens Monday in the Nixon.

Both Martin and Osa Johnson faced death innumerable times to get this photographic record of their journey, it is pointed out, but there was usually a leaven of humor which kept the perils from becoming too nerve-recking. Mrs. Johnson's pet aversion was the rhino. This ugly beast seemed to have an especial aversion to her and, wherever she met one, she always had trouble.

One of her experiences she reveates as follows:

"One day I was coming back to camp, riding a mule. Suddenly a rhino appeared. He and the mule saw each other at the same time, and both bolted along the traill. The rhino and the mule, both freightened, raced side by side along the narrow trail, with me clinging on for dear life. Finally the rhino outraced the mule and disappeared, so I was saved. But it was thrilling."

CONNELLSVILLE POLICE WAR ON STRAY DOGS

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 1.—Unable to cope with the stray dog situation by impounding the dogs until owners call for them, Chief of Police George Grubb today armed a patrolman with a shotgun and instructed him to shoot any loose dog at sight. If this measure is not effective the chief says the owners will be arrested.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

UP STAGE

By GERALD HUNT

IT ALL seemed to Beety Wheeler to be just like a dream, as she sat in her old place, and ate the delicious supper her excited and smiling mother had prepared. She wondered at the snowiness of the tablecloth. The battered spoon and the dark brown earthen bowl in which her pudding was served were dear, familiar objects, that carried her back to her childhood days.

After two years of hasty, catch-as-catch-can meals in New York restaurants and automats, home cooking tasted like ambrosia.

"As soon as you're finished, dear, we'll go out," Mrs. Wheeler said. "So many folks are anxious to see you again."

Betty looked up in surprise.

"I thought most everybody would have forgotten me!" she declared.

Her father gave a chuckle and exchanged a sly look with his wife.

Betty would have preferred to spend the evening in the cozy little parlor of the farmhouse, but she did not mention this when she realized that her parents had set their hearts on taking a walk with her.

Arm in arm, the three strolled down Bentonville's "Main street." The little town seemed of a miniature tininess to Betty, after the distances and gigantic proportions of New York City.

She noticed the quietness, too, unusual even for Bentonville. It seemed to her that the half dozen people who passed them were looking at her with extreme curiosity. Mr. Wheeler strutted along at her side, proudly, his gray head held high. He bowed to acquaintances good naturedly, but with the unmistakeable air of conferring a favor upon them.

Betty paused, with an exclamation of surprise, in front of a small white building, on the front window of which in shining, new gilt letters were inscribed the words: "Ernest Baldwin, Real Estate and Insurance."

"Ernest Baldwin!" she cried. "That isn't—Ernest?"

"Ernest, sure enough," replied Mr. Wheeler. "He started out in business for himself some time back, and he's doing fine."

So Ernest Baldwin, the boy she had played and quarreled with since their kindergarten days had stayed right in Bentonville and made a success! She remembered how angry he had been with her when she had told him she was going to New York "to make something of herself," and how she had scoffed in turn at his idea that it would be more worthwhile to remain and build up a career in Bentonville and "put the town on the map." She sighed.

The end of "Main Street" turned off into a dirt road. A mile further on, Betty saw a modest frame building she instantly recognized.

"That's the schoolhouse, isn't it?" she cried, delighted. Then she went on, puzzled. "But it's all lit up. Why do you suppose, Daddy?"

Mr. Wheeler gave a non-committal grunt.

"Always having some goings-on or other at the school," he said.

As they approached, they heard shouting and laughter. A group of people, old and young, were squeezing through the narrow doorway. In another instant, Betty found herself surrounded and was being swept toward the schoolhouse amid cries of: "Welcome home to Bentonville!"

With dazed eyes, she noted that the room was decorated gaily, that the "Home Town Orchestra" was tuning up in one corner, that lavish refreshments were spread out on a long board table.

Before she knew what happened, strong arms had hoisted her to the platform and from all sides there were insistent demands of: "Speech! Speech!"

Her eyes filled with tears, as she said falteringly:

"I really can't make a speech. Really, I can't. But I can just say that I thank you all for this wonderful welcome and I—I wish I deserved it!"

In the mass of upturned faces those of her father and her mother stood out—shining with love and pride.

Betty's words were greeted with extravagant applause. She was lifted from the platform and boys and young men, most of whom she only remembered dimly, crowded around her asking for dances.

Dimly she hoped that Ernest Baldwin would be there, among them. But it was not until later in the evening that she saw him. He had not come forward with the others to greet her and to congratulate her. It was only when she looked directly at him that he bowed, a stiff, formal bow as though they were practically strangers.

With one of her partners, she went out onto the narrow porch to enjoy the cool evening breeze after a dance. The youth hurried inside again, to bring her a glass of punch.

No sooner had he gone than she heard footsteps and looking up from the steps where she was sitting she saw Ernest Baldwin. Without waiting for an invitation he seated himself at her side. There was something almost grim in his manner. He plunged into what he had to say without waiting to find an appropriate beginning:

"We've none of us ever seen any of your press notices, Miss Wheeler. Since you are such a successful New York actress, surely you must have plenty of notices, pictures and so forth?"

Betty flinched before his challenging glance.

"So you—doubt—" she began.

"Of course Bentonville folks are very credulous," he broke in. "It's easy enough to put anything over on them. But I—" He paused, looking at her with a significance she could not misunderstand.

For an instant, her head drooped. When she looked up at him again there was a hurt expression in her soft brown eyes, and tears glistened on her lashes.

"Maybe you won't believe me," she began breathlessly, "but I honestly didn't expect all this—this fuss. I never dreamed of it. And if I did write about being successful in my letters to Mother and Dad I didn't think they'd tell anyone. I only wrote that way because I didn't want to make them miserable. I didn't want to have them know I was almost starv—"

She caught herself up with a jerk. Suddenly she felt strong hands grasping hers.

"Betty! Was it as bad as all that?"

She drew away from him.

"Oh, sometimes," she replied, matter-of-factly. "I had a job in the chorus once. I didn't hold it long, I didn't know enough about dancing. The rest of the time I worked as a waitress or salesgirl in a store, when I could get jobs like that. I didn't know enough to get office work." She saw the pity in his eyes. "But I hear that you have been very successful!" she added, bitterly. The thought taunted her. Without giving him time to reply, she sprang up and dashed away.

"You think I'm a rotten little coward!" she said to him, over her shoulder. "Well, I'll show you!"

He followed her inside, saw her climb up onto the platform, heard her speak in a ringing voice:

"Please listen, folks. I deceived you, but I didn't mean to. I wasn't a success in New York. I'm not an actress. I was a terrible failure. I couldn't hardly make a living. But I'm going back and try ovr!"

A murmur rippled through the room, from group to group.

"We don't care, Betty. We like you just the same!" Some one yelled. Others were calling to her in similar kind, homely phrases.

Seeing and hearing nothing, she rushed from the room.

She was almost running up the road when she was overtaken by Ernest Baldwin. She did not look around at him.

"You see how it is, Betty," he said, "they don't care whether you've made a success or not. They like you, just for yourself. And if you go back to New York, why—I'm going, too."

"And leave your wonderful business?" she demanded sarcastically.

"That's the mean part of it," he returned, soberly. "I'm doing pretty well. I'm doing so well, I've been thinking of asking you to marry me. But if you go back to New York, I'll have to give it up. I'm not going to let you get away from me again!"

Betty stopped and turned to face him.

"You're just sorry for me!" she accused, with flashing eyes.

"No, I'm in love with you," he replied, softly. "And you know, Betty, if you had come back home successful and all 'up stage,' I'd never had the nerve to ask you to marry me. I was so scared you really were successful!"

"Well, you needn't have worried at all," Betty said.

And then they both began to laugh.

MAN WILLING TO RUN, WOMAN QUITS TICKET

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Miss Eleanor Simpson, Democratic nominee for state senator from the Second senatorial district, withdrew from the race at a meting of the Democratic senatorial committee at New Martinsville yesterday. Thomas J. Hamilton, Moundsville public utilities official was appointed to the vacancy. Miss Simpson said that in seeking the nomination she did so in order that the Democrats, who at the time were faced with a complete dearth of candidates, might have ample time after the primaries to agree upon a male candidate. The second district comprises Marshall, Wetzel and Tyler counties.

GARBAGE PLANT'S SITE UP IN COURT THURSDAY

A hearing on the application to approve the proposed garbage disposal site for the borough of Coraopolis will be held in Common Pleas Court next Thursday. Attorney H. C. A. Hofacher, borough solicitor, had the court fix the date, as there will be numerous objections. However, Attorney Hofacker says that if the borough listens to all the objections a plant never will be built. The proposed site in Robinson township covers six acres and is optioned for $2,500. The court must approve the site.

Mrs. Skahan's Opinion of Pinkham's Compound

Saugus Centre, Mass.—"I have taken 10 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and would no more be without a bottle in the house than I would be without bread. It has made a new woman of me. I used to be so cross with my husband when I was suffering that I don't know how he stood me. Now I am cheerful and strong and feel younger than I did ten years ago when my troubles began."—Mrs. John Skahan, 20 Emerson, Saugus Centre, Mass.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Summer Resort Life More Brilliant Than Ever at White Sulphur Springs Despite Drop in Mercury

HIS weather doesn't seem a bit "summer resorty," does it? That cold crispness in the air suggests rather, I'm many will agree, long tramps through the woods. That gorating nip in the wind also makes one think cheerily of social whirl to come. A week ago the prospect was rather alling, but a few degrees' change in the mercury can alter whole mental outlook.

Down at White Sulphur Springs, though, the summer re- life is more brilliant than ever. Perhaps the cool weather s new pleasure to the luncheon and dinner and dance phase ummer life. The Pittsburgh colony there still continues to ne of the social leaders, I understand.

e George Crawfords and Mrs. ert N. Warmack, their mother, a large dinner dance last t at Kates Mountain Club. Warmack and her daughter, Crawford, were among the Casts noted at the luncheon given Mrs. C. Coudert Erskine, of New York, Wednesday, in the Tudor room of the Greenbrier.

Down at Asheville there's a little colony of Pittsburgh folks, too. Really, if one goes to any summer resort favored by society folks there one can find a miniature Pittsburgh.

Sidney S. Liggett and Laura Liggett are there just now, I hear. Probably as the season advances there'll be more folks there. I've always noticed that our society people like to go there particularly in between seasons.

THE James H. Hammonds, of the Hotel Schenley, are still at their summer home, "The Ledges," in the Thousand Islands. They gave a luncheon Wednesday at the Thousand Islands Country Club, I've heard.

OF course, you've heard that Mrs. Alexander Laughlin, Jr., is back from Europe. She stopped over in New York a few days upon her arrival.

SPEAKING of Canada, I happen to remember that some Pittsburgh folks will be leaving soon for St. Catharine's Ontario, Canada, to attend the wedding of Miss Ethel Cattan Piper, daughter of Canon and Mrs. Frederick Charles Piper, of St. Catharine's, and George Kneeland McNulty, of Glen Mitchell road, Sewickley, formerly of New York. The wedding will take place, you'll recall, on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. George's Episcopal Church, St. Catharine's, with Canon Riley, of the Hamilton Cathedral of Ontario, as the officiant.

The Randall Turner Van Pelts, of Sewickley; the Frederick Buckmasters and the James D. Murrays, of Pittsburgh; the Franklin Sherman Stonehalls, of New York, brother-in-law and sister of the bridegroom; Eleanor Suzanna McNulty, of Sewickley, and Mrs. Charles Tuerrell, of Bellport, Long Island and New York, are among those who are planning, I hear, to attend the wedding.

Mabel Piper will be her sister's only attendant, and Randall Turner Van Pelt, of Sewickley, will be best man.

THE Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Jones and their children, of Oakmont, spent August in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, did ya know? They came back Thursday night. Dr. Jones is rector of St. Thomas' Memorial Episcopal Church.

TODAY is the day of the first fall weddings. And one of the first brides of September is Edith Bane, daughter of Mrs. John C. Bane, of South Atlantic avenue, and the late John C. Bane. Edith became the bride of John Gilson Stewart, son of Mrs. David Gilson Stewart, of Williamsport, this morning at 11 o'clock in the Shadyside Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Dr. Murdoch McLeod was the officiant.

The bride, who wore a white chiffon ensemble and hat to harmonize and a corsage of roses, was attended by her sister, Katharine Bane. Katharine wore a similar costume in blue crepe. A small wedding breakfast followed in the home of the bride's mother. The young Stewarts have left by motor for Canada, and upon their return will be at home after October 1 in the Fairfax.

Edith is a Radcliffe girl, and also studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York. Mr. Stewart is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh.

MR. AND MRS. M. R. NORMAN, of Howe street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mildred Norman, to John R. Schwabrow, of Shelby, Mont., formerly of Pittsburgh.

MR. AND MRS. SAMUEL PHILSON, of Pittsburgh and Uniontown, have returned from Europe after a stay of two months. Mrs. Philson was Miss Ruth Over, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Over, of Braddock, before her marriage on June 12.

A NUMBER of the residents in the Schenley apartments are out of the city. Theodore Ahrens is in Europe, as are Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Bannerot. Miss Rebekah and Miss Charlotte Fey are at Lake Placid.

AMONG the patronesses for the supper dance to be given by the Ursuline Alumnae on Wednesday at the Pittsburgh Field Club will be Miss Lillian Barket, Mrs. Thomas H. Ford, Miss Mary Hackett, Mrs. O. Hommel, Mrs. J. J. Maloney, Mrs. Harry Snyder and Miss Marie Stack.

MISS HELEN DONALDSON, of Watson boulevard, will leave Friday for California, where she will be the guest of friends in Los Angeles. She will return by way of Seattle, Lake Louise, Banff and the Canadian Rockies.

MR. AND MRS. GUY HULL are traveling through the West. Before their return they will go to Yellowstone Park and Glacier National Park.

Brandon, of Morals Court and the reports of delegates to the state federation, both on the same day, and later in the month will have luncheon at Webster Hall and afterwards visit the international art exhibit.

December 10 and 12 are the dates selected for the two Christmas parties, the first of which will be a tea for children of members and the second for the children of the community. At the former, Mrs. Anna Marshall McCracken will tell of "Christmas in Picture, Song and Story" and the club choral will carol. Cy Hungerford will entertain the little folk at the second affair. Dr. Colt R. Hoechst, head of the extension department of the Board of Public Education, and S. W. Allen, of the Pittsburgh Trust Company, are the speakers listed for January. Chalfant, of the state federation, will conduct a club institute and there will be a tea on March 25, while for drama day, on the eleventh, Mrs. Dulce Fiske Fairman, president of the Keystone Association for Historical Research, will be the speaker. WHAT'S ON THE AIR

A NEW broadcast series, to be known as "The Variety Hour," will be inaugurated by the National Broadcasting Company tonight. It will be broadcast from 8 to 9 o'clock and WCAE will be in the hookup. The new series will feature Mildred Hunt, soprano "crooner;" Merle Johnston's saxophone quartet, and the Serenaders, a male quartet. Weekly offerings by this group will consist of selected numbers from the best of popular ballads and current song hits. The inaugural program will open with the familiar "Just Like a Melody Out of the Sky," introducing the full ensemble, before other numbers call upon individual groups and solo artists.

Lew White, organist, will present a Victor Herbert program through the NBC System, including KDKA, at 7:30 o'clock. A group of the Irish-American composer's favorite numbers will open the program. "Badinage," "Devotion" and "Whispering Willows," three light but charming pieces, will folow. Selections from "Eileen," a musical comedy, and "Habanera," from "Natoma," and the theme melodies from "The Fortune Teller," also will be played.

A sonata by Cesar Franck, distinguished French organist and composer, will be played by Godfrey Ludlow, violinist, and Lolita Cabrera Gainsborg, pianist, in a program to be heard through KDKA at 8:30 o'clock. Franck did much to turn the tide of music in France away from grand opera—until that time its only real musical form—into the modern walks of orchestral music.

Dari Bethmann, baritone, and Constance Merring and Muriel Pollack, a piano duo recently with "Rio Rita," will present a program over KDKA at 9:00 o'clock. Among Mr. Bethmann's solos will be "Oh, Miss Hannah!" "You're What I Need," from "Funny Face" and "Allah's Garden," by Pollock. Numbers by the piano duo will begin with a medley of airs from "Rio Rita," the musical success, and continue with a movement from Debussy's "Petite Suite for Two Pianos," a waltz in C by Arensky, and Logan's "Pale Moon."

LABOR THEMES IN CHURCHES SUNDAY

Services in the churches throughout the city tomorrow will be of an interesting nature, when Labor Day will be emphasized in the sermons of many pastors and others preaching their first sermons since returning from vacationing. A dedication service also will be held by one church, while another celebrates its one-hundred and twenty-eighth anniversary. The last out-door service of the East End churches will be held on Calvary lawn.

After an absence of three months, vacationing abroad, the Rev. Dr. William Porkess, pastor, St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church, Wilkinsburg, preaches tomorrow on "Outlook and Insight." He also speaks in the evening.

U. S. STARS WIN CUP PLAY, 11-1

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—The Walker cup emblematic of international amateur golf supremacy, remains where it always has been—in the United States.

Paced and inspired by the brilliancy of its captain, the mighty Bobby Jones of Atlanta, America's team crushed Great Britain almost as mercilessly in the singles matches yesterday as it did in two-ball foursomes, retaining the trophy by 11 matches to 1. It was by far the most overwhelming defeat yet suffered by the Britons, although they have never won a cup.

Only Charles (Chick) Evans failed to come through to make it a grand slam. He fought a brilliant up-hill battle, his opponent, T. A. Torrance, who continually broke his spirit by sinking putts from 10 to 30 feet, won by the slenderest of margins, one up.

[illegible] of turning in the most [illegible]ictory naturally went to [illegible]ible Bobby, who trimmed [illegible]ins, 13 and 12. The victory gave Bobby the unofficial amateur championship of the world as both he and Perkins are king of the amateurs in their respective countries.

Bobby's golfing mate from Atlanta, Watts Gunn, had the next largest margin, defeating R. A. Hardman, 11 and 10.

This is how the other Americans and Britons finished their 36-hole singles matches:

George Von Elm, Detroit, defeated Dr. William Tweddell, British team captain, 3 and 2.

Jess Sweetser, New York, won over W. L. Hope, 5 and 4.

Harrison Johnston, Minneapolis, defeated Eustace Storey, 4 and 2.

Francis Ouimet, Boston, defeated Maj. C. O. Hezlet, 8 and 7.

Roland Mackenzie, Washington, beat Capt. G. N. C. Martin, 2 and 1.

Excepting yesterday the worst drubbing England's sons had received in fighting the Yankees was 9 matches to 3 at Long Island, N. Y., in 1923.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Up to Hill to Keep Card Series From Ending In Failure—Pirates and Athletics Lead Majors in Intersectional Competition. Hockey to Be in New Hands Here.

IT'S UP to Carmen Hill today to keep the Pirates' important series with the Cardinals from ending in a flat failure. If he can make it two out of three, such a result, though disappointing to those optimistic fans who had hoped for a clean sweep, will represent a gain of one game on the leaders, with the Bucs getting another chance in a set of four games at St. Louis next week.

Carmen Hill

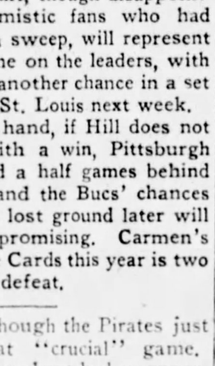
On the other hand, if Hill does not come through with a win, Pittsburgh will be seven and a half games behind the pace setters and the Bucs' chances of making up the lost ground later will not look very promising. Carmen's record against the Cards this year is two victories and one defeat.

IT SEEMS as though the Pirates just can't win that "crucial" game. Four times during the last three weeks they have had an opportunity of putting themselves in a much better position in the flag race by winning a certain contest, but on every occasion they slipped.

The second game yesterday was a striking instance. If the Rovers had been able to ring up a double victory in the bargain bill they would be in third place today, only one game below the Cubs and second place and only four and a half games from the top. As it is they failed to gain an inch on the leaders and are holding fourth place by only half a game, their first undisputed occupancy of a first division berth since May 9.

REMY KREMER appeared to be showing one of the season's queerest reversals of hurling form in the eighth inning of the opening tilt, when, after pitching himself out of a hole by fanning Orsatti and making Bottomley pop out with two men on the paths, he uncorked a wild pitch that permitted both runners to score.

Catcher Charley Hargreaves took all the blame for it afterward and said Kremer had not been at fault. He explained that he and Kremer had changed signals an inning or two earlier, but that he had slipped up on the new arrangement and given the sign for a fast ball when he wanted a curve. Kremer threw a fast one, as directed and Hargreaves, crouched for a curve, was unable to straighten up in time to catch the ball.



Remy Kremer

THOUGH taken out, Kremer got credit for the Pirate victory, which gives him a record of eight straight decisions, and 10 wins out of his last 11 games. It was his first triumph of the year over St. Louis, though previously he had beaten every other club in the league in one or more games.

THE good will and esteem that the Pittsburgh players have for their hustling chief were demonstrated when the surviving members of the 1927 championship team presented to Manager Donie Bush through Rosy Rowswell, an easy chair and a smoking outfit. The little pilot was so affected that he found it difficult to express his feelings.

"There aren't enough words in the dictionary to tell how grateful I feel for that wonderful gift, or, above all, for what it

HAGEN AND FARRELL RENEW "TITLE" SERIES

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Trailing one match, Johnny Farrell, American open champion, had a chance to square accounts with Walter Hagen, British open titleholder, in their second 36-hole match for the world golf championship over the Ridgemoor Country Club course today.

Hagen won the first match of the series, one up, at Detroit this week. They plan to play the best three out of five.

BLACKBURNE, CHISOX MANAGER, SUSPENDED

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—(INS.)—Russell Blackburne, manager of the Chicago White Sox, starts a three-day suspension today. According to President Barnard of the American League, who announced the suspension last night, Blackburne verbally assaulted Umpire Barry in the Philadelphia game last night.

AMERICANS VANQUISH FRENCH STARS

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—George M. Lott, Jr., and John Hennessy, young American Davis cup players, registered one of the greatest victories of their tennis careers here yesterday when they crushed Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, of France, the English doubles champions, on the courts at the Longwood Cricket Club.

The Americans, heroes of the play against Italy in the challenge round of the Davis cup matches, took the replayed semi-final round from the Frenchmen in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, thereby winning a place in today's final against Gerald Patterson and Jack Hawkes, the Australians, who qualified Thursday.

U. S. STARS STRONG

Lott and Hennessy played a great game against Cochet and Brugnon the same day, but darkness came on when the match stood two set four games all and they decided to play it over.

The Americans were in much better form yesterday afternoon and gave a remarkable exhibition of offensive and defensive tennis. They used the volley and kill effectively and their lobing, especially against Brugnon, was overwhelming.

Though their earned points totalled but 22 against 25 for Cochet and Brugnon, they had but 30 errors against 63 for the Frenchmen. During the three sets, Cochet and Brugnon each lost four services to Hennessy's one.

During the first set, the Americans gained the upper hand by breaking the service of both of their opponents. This setback apparently unnerved the French players for in the second set both were wild and unsteady. Due to Cochet's errors, the Americans not only broke through Brugnon twice, but through him as well.

The fiery Henri then started poaching on Brugnon's side of the court and, though he made many brilliant angling shots, he made enough nets to give Lott and Hennessy the set at 6-1.

LOTT BRINGS LEAD

Lott gave the Americans a one-game lead on his first service in the third set, but Cochet, by playing most of Brugnon's court as well as his own, evened matters in the next game.

This was the last French rally. Lott and Hennessy sailed through

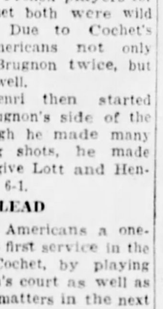
Barnhart Sent to Hoosiers

AFTER long and loyal service to the Pirates, Outfielder Clyde Barnhart has been "farmed out" to the Indianapolis club of the American Association.



Clyde Barnhart.

Pooch will hustle to the Hoosiers in an effort to give them strength in their drive for the American Association flag. The departure of Adam Comorosky and the accident suffered by Herman Layne has deprived the Indiana team of two fine outfielders. The Hoosier management pleaded for some help and Barney can be spared at this time.

The Pennsylvania Dutchman has been out of the game for weeks. Sickness caused his removal and when he recovered Fred Brickell was moving along in such a fast stride that Barnhart could not replace him. And now Comorosky is playing the pasture regularly.

POOR CARD MARKS CLOSING CIRCUIT EVENTS

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Getaway Day racing at the New York State Fair yesterday did not prove up to the high standard set by the Grand Circuit performance on previous days of the meeting.

The free-for-all trot drew only two starters, and Hazelton easily won this in straight heats from Sam Williams. The best time was 2:03¼. Hazelton trotted the final quarter of the first heat in 28½ seconds, which was considered very good under the circumstances with a strong wind lashing the horses

ADAM COMOROSKY IN WAGNERIAN POSE — Remember the unorthodox, bow-legged batting pose of the one and only Honus Wagner, of Pirate fame in the days long gone? A fan arriving at Forbes Field and getting a rear view of Adam Comorosky, the young outfielder recently recalled from the Indianapolis Club of the American Association, where he slugged the ball at a .350 clip, standing up there at the plate might easily mistake him for the grand old veteran. Photo shows Adam all set for a bunt.

NOTES of the BOXERS

JULES BECK has almost completed his card for his Ike McFowler-Jim Sigman heavyweight show at the Duquesne Steel baseball park next Thursday night. He is planning a semi-final between Harry Taylor and Mule Brown. Joe Louder will meet Jack Unglo or Jack Beatty. Battling Gizzy will encounter Young Angelo and Bobby Burns will box Tommy Hileman.

Ray Miller, of Chicago boxes Nat Kawler in the main bout of a show in Brooklyn tonight.

WEST VA. OPENS GRID CAMP

JACKSON MILLS, W. Va., Sept. 1.—West Virginia University's football training camp was officially started this morning. Following the distribution of uniforms the Mountaineer varsity squad launched the practice work with a limbering up exercise at 10:45 o'clock.

Head Coach Ira Rodgers announced prior to the beginning of practice that he expects every member of the varsity squad to toe the mark. He stated that only one of the 43 men whom he had invited to come to training camp had, thus far, asked for permission to be late in reporting, and that any of the others who failed to arrive today would be turned out of camp, with the suggestion that they report when the squad returns to Morgantown, September 15.

Ted Nixon, substitute guard last year, had asked for, and has received permission to report two days late.

WILD LIFE LEAGUE MEET OPENS SUNDAY

WOOD'S BOAT SURE OF SPEED BOAT PLACE

DETROIT, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Only one boat, Miss America V, piloted by George Wood, was certain of a berth on the American team that will defend the Harmsworth power boat trophy against the challenge of Miss Hariam Barbara Carstairs, of England, following qualifying trials here yesterday.

The Miss America V was accorded a place on the team without taking the water, on the basis of her 72 statute miles per hour mark, made during the French bid for the trophy two years ago.

WHEELING GOLF PLAY GETS STARTED TODAY

CHAMBERSBURG WINS SECOND-HALF FLAG

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Chambersburg, Pa., won the second-half title of the Blue Ridge League yesterday by defeating Martinsburg, 7 to 0.

Hanover Pa., which won the first-half championship, will begin a post-season series with Chambersburg at Chambersburg Tuesday. Four victories are necessary to win the title.

The winner of the Chambersburg-Hanover series will meet the champion of the Mid-Atlantic League in a series of games for the title of the section.

This is the first year a Blue Ridge-Middle-Atlantic series was arranged. It will take the place of the "five-state" series of previous years, in which Blue Ridge and Eastern Shore winners met.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Sam Cohn, West Virginia state singles tennis champion, defeated John MacDiarmid, 16-year-old Fort Worth, Tex. schoolboy, 6-1 7-5, in a tri-finals match of the Southern West Virginia open tennis tournament.

CORSAIRS SEEK WIN IN SERIES FINAL

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

THE "rubber" game of the Cardinal-Pirate series this afternoon is expected to bring a terrific battle. Although the Buccos are six and one-half games from the top they feel they still have a fair chance to overtake the leaders, and will therefore leave no stone unturned to cop the finale today.

The "fifty-fifty" outcome of the double-header of yesterday gave the Oaklanders undisputed possession of fourth place and the home team is only a few points beneath the third-place Giants who continue to crack.

HILL TO HURL

For the third contest with the leaders the Pirates have Carmen Hill ready for action. The Redbird probably will go into battle behind Bill Sherdel, wee lefthander, although there is a chance that Clarence Mitchell, the spitball southpaw, will get the assignment.

After today's game the Pirates will turn toward Chicago where tomorrow they are due to take on the Cubs in a single encounter. At the completion of this game the two clubs will hustle to Pittsburgh for the Labor Day engagements of Monday. A single game with the Bears on Tuesday will wind up the long home stay of the Buccos; indeed, the home card will have only two more games after Tuesday, these being with the Reds about the middle of the month.

The double-header of Friday brought heavy excitement to the Oakland orchard, about 20,000 fans being out for the fun. The Pirates landed the opening struggle by a hair-line decision, the Redbirds furnishing a scare in the eighth when they made four runs. The score was 6 to 5. The closing struggle was a tense issue until the eighth when the enemy put the game on ice with a three-run spurt. The figures on this clash were 6 to 2.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Curt Walker, Cincinnati Reds right fielder, suffered a fracture of the skull yesterday when struck on the head by a ball thrown by Woody English, Chicago shortstop, in the game between the Cubs and Cincinnati, Dr. Stewart Hagen, Cincinnati club physician, announced.

Dr. Hagen said that while Walker is in a serious condition, he did not believe the player would be in the hospital for more than two or three weeks.

SUSPEND CHISOX BOSS

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—President Barnard of the American League has suspended Russell Blackburne, manager of the Chicago White Sox, for three days. Blackburne was charged with verbally assaulting Umpire Barry over a decision at the plate in the game at Philadelphia last Tuesday.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by HARRY KECK
SPORTS EDITOR

THE knockout defeat of Joe Dundee, the welterweight champion of the world, by Young Jack Thompson, the California Negro star, in two rounds at Chicago Thursday night, which did not carry with it the title because of the fact that Thompson was forced to come into the ring over the class poundage, has an interesting local angle in that it was the closing of a match for Jack Zivic, Pittsburgh welterweight, with Thompson at Chicago for July 11, after Jack had engaged in tough bouts in California with Young Corbett and Jackie Fields, that precipitated Zivic's break with his manager, Jimmy Bronson, of New York. Zivic gave the sensational Corbett a hard 10-round bout, in which he suffered a bad gash over his left eye. Eight days later, he boxed Fields, despite the injury, and the referee stopped the bout, giving Fields credit for a technical knockout victory.

FOLLOWING this bout, Zivic received a telegram from his manager, telling him to stop off in Chicago on the way back home to box Thompson. This aroused his ire and he balked and then broke with his pilot. Thompson, by the way, has been beaten by Corbett, who now is on his way East to box Sergt. Sammy Baker in Madison Square Garden, New York, September 13. The winner was slated to box Dundee for the title, but the chances now are that Thompson will figure in the eliminations before the big climax.

SOMETHING for somebody else to worry about: How will the college football managements fare financially this fall after the off season for baseball, boxing and other sports right on down the line to this new-fangled pastime which travels under the name of badminton and can be described only in from two to three columns of solid reading matter?

THE sports lovers have balked at paying big league prices for baseball and boxing and have managed to stay away until it —in the region of the mags' pocketbooks. Will they go football games at from $2 to a copy? Or will they wait ... the good old gridiron sport returns to fundamentals, which means the dear old one and two bucks for choice seats?

OF course, college football is an amateur sport, or is supposed to be. But in these days of big stadia, competition for star players, high-salaried coaches, etc., the mazuma must trickle through the turnstiles to make the old mare just what she used to be, as they sing at the big frays. The chances for a heavy income do not appear to be any too hot for the impending season, unless the other sports of the year have been kidding everybody.

CHALK up another bright one for the New York Athletic Commission, which has just ruled that boxers shall not wear the usual aluminum protection cups in future bouts under its auspices. The obvious reason is to discourage fouls, but the result will be some serious accidents which likely will lead to a speedy rescinding of the order. It is to be hoped that the Pennsylvania and other commissions do not adopt the New York body's attitude in the matter.

THE scandal-mongers all season have been circulating a libelous report that Manager Bush of the Pirates does not enjoy the respect, confidence or love of his players. The presentation of a chair by them in the clubhouse before yesterday's doubleheader with the Cardinals hardly bears out this canard. Bush does have the confidence and respect of his men, and all the more so because of the brave fight he has made against heavy odds and undeserved adverse public criticism.

THE czars of amateur athletics are aghast at the very thought of Jole Ray turning professional for a series of races against the winner of the Olympic marathon and other stars. Ray, himself, after more than 15 years of running for watches and medals, frankly says he needs the money. If he doesn't get it in this manner he will have to earn it by driving a taxicab. His days as a runner are numbered and he merely is going to cut in on a little of the graft that the A. A. U. has enjoyed all of these years at the expense of himself and countless other Jole Rays. The athletes make the sports, but when they want their share of the gate they are supposed to be committing a horrible sin. Wonder if Jole didn't do a lot of thinking about what happened to Bill Tilden before definitely making up his mind to go along with C. C. Pyle and the latter's backers?

LARRY SEMANS COPS NEMACOLIN GOLF TITLE

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 1.—Larry Semans, of Uniontown, retained the championship of the Nemacolin Country Club, near Beallsville, yesterday, defeating Tom Bloch, of Wheeling, Princeton University student, 2 up. Dave Nears Third Title

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 1.—Dave O'Loughlin, star of the P. A. A., stands close, exceedingly close, to permanent possession of the historic Fayette county cup, up for competition for the past 16 years. O'Loughlin, who already boasts two legs on the coveted and long-sought trophy, yesterday afternoon passed decisively his most formidable ordeal in his quest for local honors by eliminating spectacular young B. F. Arkle, Wheeling and former Pitt freshman luminary, 6-3, 6-3, in a brilliant, hard-driving semi-final fracas.

Gwynn King, 1927 champion here, defaulted in the upper bracket, with the result that the field in that sector has been left to O'Loughlin's younger brother, Billy, of Shady Side Academy fame, and to Bill Abrams, husky Wheeling hope, who encounters Billy in the remaining semi-final today.

DAVE PLAYS WELL

Dave O'Loughlin and Arkle stroked heavily from the baseline throughout their torrid duel. O'Loughlin's mighty forehand, however, carried the dynamite, and Arkle, who blew service in the first game of the match, was never able to gain an edge.

Bill O'Loughlin fought gamely to enter the semi-finals. J. G. Carroll, home youth, had him 5-4 in the third set of their round 3 tussle, but served enough double faults at that critical juncture to turn the tide and go under at 6-3, 3-6, 7-5. Later Bill dropped his initial set to Billy Ramsay, another Uniontown satellite, but recovered strongly to outstay the enemy in a tilt that saw excellent driving by the winner and volleying by the loser, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Abrams entered the semi-finals at the expense of Sullivan, Winged Head performer, whose wildness combined with the victor's clever barrier assault to account for a 6-3, 7-5 decision. Arkle's quarter-final victim was Jim O'Connor, accomplished Steel City blond, who has been playing too much golf for the good of his tennis of late. O'Connor played well in spots, but succumbed as Arkle unleashed a wicked onslaught on his backhand.

WINS IN DOUBLES

Dave O'Loughlin likewise broke into the doubles final. Displaying bits of the finest driving and volleying of his career, he swept along with his partner, Sullivan, to 5-7, 9-7, 6-0 semi-final triumph over Ramsay and O'Connor after the latter two had had two match points.

O'Loughlin and Sullivan mingle with Arkle and Abrams in the finals today.

tests. Paul Waner drove a line homer into the rightfield stands with Brother Lloyd on base in the fifth, the two tallies playing a big part in a triumph over Grover Alexander. Aleck was placed under a handicap in the first round on a poor play by Thirdbaseman Andy High.

ALECK CHASED

Remy Kremer and Aleck tangled in the prelude, the patriarch retiring in the sixth in favor of Arthur Reinhart. Kremer was shelled off in the eighth, Chick Hafey's homer over the left field wall being a part of the drive. Burleigh Grimes relieved Frenchy and held the small advantage.

Jess Haines and Fred Fussell had it out in the nightcap. Up to the eighth frame the output of St. Louis runs were rather lucky, the enemy owing a one-run lead in the eighth. At this point Sunny Jim Bottomly poled a homer into the right field stands with Frisch on base, the inning bringing three tallies. Dawson relieved Fussell in the big round. Jess Haines went the route for the Cards. Walter Maranville's brilliant fielding, hitting and base-running enlivened the Redbird success.

means to me as a token of the feeling of the boys who were behind it," Manager Bush said last night. "I have never been associated with a finer lot of men. I am proud of them as ball players and I love them as friends. No one can realize how dear that present is to me, for I cannot express myself in mere words. But I want to thank every one of the boys publicly and to say that I appreciate their gift and the warm friendship that it represents more than anything else I ever have experienced in all of my baseball life."

COMPOSITE records of the intersectional series played in the two major leagues so far this year show that the Pirates in the National League and the Athletics in the American have made the best showing. The West leads in the Heydler loop and the East is in front in the junior circuit. The figures follow:

MONTREAL dispatches, apparently from an official source, having borne out the rumors of the last few weeks that Pittsburgh will have a team in the National Hockey League next season after all, local followers of the ice game are awaiting information as to the ownership and probable make-up of the team.

That the francise will be in the hands of new owners seems certain, which will be a popular development and a step in the right direction for the best interests of local hockey, inasmuch as the policy of the former holders last season left a decidedly bad taste.

THE home fans were treated shabbily in the first place when the club bosses attempted to sell the franchise to another city without giving local men a chance to buy it, persistently denying that a sale was pending or contemplated after the agreement had been closed.

On top of this their rights were ignored again, when they were deprived of a chance to see the post-season playoffs through the action of the Pirate owners in agreeing to have the games played at New York because they looked for better gates there.

Dick Carroll

A NEW deal all around is needed, and, according to reports, that is what is being planned. It is believed that at least one of the Pittsburgh men who visited President Calder in Montreal this week plans to turn his interests over to others later, and it will not be surprising if Roy D. Schooley, the leading hockey man in this part of the country, is eventually found at the head of the club. Stories in circulation say that plans may include the bringing back of Dick Carroll, former Yellowjacket coach, who produced two champion teams here, to succeed Odie Cleghorn as coach, and that a trade is being shaped that will send Hib Milks and Harold Darragh to Ottawa.

their service, just before and after they broke through Brugnon, and then burst through Cochet in the final game.

WILLS-HAWKES WIN

Helen Wills and Jack Hawkes had but little trouble eliminating Marjorie Morrill, Boston, and Jean Borotra, France, in one of the two semi-final matches in the national mixed doubles. Neither of the young women had much to do in the match, won by the Wills-Hawkes team, 6-2, 6-1, because Hawkes and Borotra dominated all of the play.

The victory placed them in the final round with Edith Cross, San Francisco, and E. F. Moon, Australia. The latter pair gained the title bracket by defeating Mrs. F. I. Mallory, New York, and Jack Crawford, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3.

SARATOGA MEET CLOSES

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Saratoga's race meeting of a month comes to a close today and the Bang-Tails will shift their activities to Belmont Park again starting next Monday. The twenty-fourth running of the Hopeful Stakes, $50,000 guaranteed, tops the closing card at Saratoga. Blue Larkspur, owned by E. R. Bradley, is the favorite in the field of 16.

DIAMONDS WIN; NEAR TITLE

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Sept. 1.—The Black Diamonds moved a bit nearer the second-half championship in the Mid-Atlantic League here yesterday when they defeated the Scottdale Scots, 11 to 2. Jones had three hits for the Diamonds.

At Clarksburg, the Generals lost to the second-place Cumberland Colts by an 8-to-2 score. The Colts won the game in the fifth inning.

Wheeling hit Anderson hard at Johnstown to beat the Johnnies, 7 to 1. Gwathmey held the home team to four hits.

Jeannette lost a tough game to Charleroi at Jeannette, 2 to 1. Temple gave up but two hits, but they both drove in runs. Jeannette got five.

PURPLE SIGNS STEWART

EVANSTON, Ill., Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Paul Stewart, assistant baseball coach of the University of Illinois, has been appointed head baseball coach of Northwestern University. He succeeds Maury Kent, who will become assistant football coach.

The VARSITY COLUMN
by Jess M. Carver

THE Dukes of Duquesne can look forward with eager anticipation to the opening of the football campaign next week now that they have solved the problem of replacing John Weibel, the to-be medico of Erie who forsook the Bluff to return to Vanderbilt and finish up his medical studies. Robert Patrick Reagan of Canonsburg has been secured for the assistant coaching job. The announcement was made by John Holahan, graduate manager of athletics, and confirmed the yarn carried in this column some weeks ago to the effect that Reagan was to receive the major consideration as a candidate for the post.

Reagan played football at Notre Dame while Layden was galloping about as a member of the famous "Four Horsemen" backfield. He was a center and guard, though he under-studied Adam Walsh at the pivotal position the major part of the time. Since graduating from the South Bend school, Reagan has been assistant coach at the University of Utah; Creighton University at Omaha, Neb., and at Chattanooga University, Chattanooga, Tenn.

WALLACE, freshman coach at Notre Dame, was also considered for the post, even, I am informed, approached on the matter, but did not feel like giving up his job at South Bend to come to Pittsburgh. Other former Notre Dame men were also sounded out, but it was finally decided to retain Reagan. Knowing the Notre Dame system, and being familiar to no little extent with Coach Layden's own particular style of football, he will be a valuable addition to the Red and Blue coaching staff.

Pitt gained a future athletic star, possibly of three-sport magnitude when Walter Berger, Homestead High's all-around athletic star, registered at the university this week. Other tri-state schools were very anxious to induce the Homestender to enroll, but his decision to remain at home so as to be in touch with his father and his father's business and the personality of Dr. H. C. Carlson, Pitt's great basketball coach, influenced him to select Pitt as his school.

BERGER'S dad is a painting contractor, and it is the young man's ambition to follow in his father's footsteps. By attending Pitt, he will be able to keep in touch with the business and gain valuable experience and at the same time make valuable connections.

He is a crack basketball, football and baseball star, and will participate in the first two sports at Pitt.

AGATHONS PLAY HERE

The Massillon Agathons will be the attraction this afternoon at Dean Field, meeting the J. L. Thomas nine of the City League. Manager Zappa has his charges working at a good clip just now, and is desirous of making a good showing as the season closes. The game will start at 3 p. m. sharp.

Rockne Given Testimonial for Sea Rescue

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Knute Rockne, Notre Dame University football coach, assisted in the transfer of two wounded sailors from a passing Italian ship to the liner Transylvania, according to a radiogram received by Christy Walsh from the Transylvania, on which Rockne is returning after a European tour.

The transfer was effected in a rough sea and fog, the radiogram said, adding that Rockne, in recognition of his efforts, was presented a testimonial by Maj. Philip Fleming of West Point.

CHICAGO 'BEER BARONS' BARRED FROM TRACKS

CHICAGO, Sept. 1—(AP.)—Because of their brawl in the paddock of the Hawthorne race track recently, Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake, Chicago "Beer Barons," have been banished indefinitely from all race tracks in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba.

Druggan and Lake became involved in the brawl when they objected to a claim made for one of their horses at Hawthorne. In the fight than ensued, it was charged that they drew pistols and threatened R. Z. Jenkins, California turfman. James McGee, a trainer, also came to their aid when they were attacked by a jockey, who attempted to aid Jenkins.

RACERS START PRACTICE FOR BUTLER AUTO EVENT

BUTLER, Pa., Sept. 1.—Pilots and riders this afternoon will commence practice workouts on the local speed circle for the 150-mile 100-lap gasoline derby, the 10-mile stock car automobile race and the five and 10-mile motorcycle speed duels to be staged at the fair grounds here Labor Day afternoon, commencing at 2 o'clock daylight savings time.

Herbert Fechter, of Pittsburgh, victor in the Decoration Day and July Fourth racing classics in this city, brought his fast Frontenac creation to Butler early this morning, and declared that it is in the same quick-and-span shape that it was when he carried it triumphant over the finish line in the previous holiday events.

HOW BASEBALL'S STARS TWINKLED YESTERDAY

Rogers Hornsby (.380)—Tripled once and scored a run in three times at bat.

Paul Waner (.371)—Hit a home run and singled, scored two runs, batted in three runs, in seven times at bat.

Al Simmons (.354)—Singled and batted in one run in four trips.

Freddy Lindstrom (.344)—Went hitless in four times at bat.

Jim Bottomley (.335)—Hit a home run and two doubles, scoring two runs and batting in three runs in eight times at bat.

Babe Ruth (.339), Lou Gehrig (.375), and Goose Goslin (.381)—Were idle.

ENTRY LIST CLOSES FOR POLICE CARNIVAL

The entry list for the tenth annual Bureau of Police field day and athletic meet at the Pitt Stadium next Saturday afternoon closes this evening with a gigantic lot of blanks already turned in.

The meet will be a hummer in every respect, with something doing every minute from the time the Marathon runners finish their race until late in the afternoon.

With several Olympic athletes to add class to the affair, the meet program will be an outstanding one, and some great performances are looked for.

HALF WIVES by Winifred Van Duzer

Lan Tells Ione That He Is Jealous and Wants Her to Himself

"WHY, all right—" In a rush of grieved disappointment. He sounded so far away, so formal; he had no happy pride in what she had done.

And he was bored with going home; he called it monotonous. Was it only that he felt himself injured by her being here in the office? Or was marriage beginning to seem irksome?

Her hands shook as she dusted powder over her nose and drew the smart little grosgrain brim down to her brows.

But he gave her a pleased, laughing look when they were going along the street; it lifted the heaviness from her heart. She put a small hand on his arm, smiling.

"How about it, Lanny? Quick, now—all pretty—"

"Ah, the darling! Hasn't forgotten, then."

"Why should I forget? You know we haven't spoken our little piece for a week. Is that nice?"

"There've been few spare minutes, Frills. And a fellow hesitates to say silly things to a girl so brilliant."

"Oh! You're teasing me now; you wouldn't mean that." But he more than half meant it. Jenepher—or was it Marie?—believed men didn't like women to be bright. "They feel that way themselves, and don't want competition," was what she said. But not Alan—oh, indeed! Why, he couldn't be petty!

It was only, she decided, that he was irritated about her working.

So she was astonished when he said, quite simply, over the dinner table, "Why don't you keep your job for a while, Frills?"

"But—why, you'd like me to? I thought you wished me to give it up?"

"I've been thinking it over, Ione." Now he was formal again. "Marie was right, of course. You have more ability than most girls. Perhaps it does go to waste cooking and sweeping and washing dishes.

"Anyhow I'm not standing in your way."

CHAPTER XXXVI.

IONE never understood the change that came into her life after that night.

It was too gradual, too much a slow turn-about of everything. There had been a way of living; now there was a different way.

She had gone along thinking things were as they always had been; then all at once she saw them as they were really.

It might have confused her and made her sad. But now she was too busy to ponder and worry. She struggled with double duty, trying to give herself honestly to each.

Often, after dinner, she suggested:

"Isn't there a game, dear? I don't mind if you go, really I'd rather. I'll get some sleep and be all right afterward."

So he went to the game, glad to get away from the darkened room.

It was a new thing to him, a woman forced to bed by a headache. Mother Blake never had been ill that he could remember. But, of course, she stayed at home and took care of herself!

She was very lovely and very dear but there were times when she made him feel inadequate somehow. Rather as if he were a small boy again, all thumbs.

She was, as his mother had said, so much a person. Really spectacular around the Weimar plant.

This very thing had precipitated them into the first quarrel of their married life. It was after the day he had called up Antony Ros.

"Blake?" came the liquid tenor over the wire, repeating his name. "Oh, you're Miss Farr's husband!"

Blind with rage, Alan jerked up the receiver without a word.

And when he told Ione she laughed. "Why shouldn't he say it, Lan? He knows me better than you, is all."

"But no man likes to be on the map because he's some woman's husband!"

He later saw himself unreasonable and unjust. But he wouldn't admit it and they didn't speak again till he awakened in the dark and heard Ione sobbing.

He caught her in his arms then, begging her to forgive, pressing her hand to his wet eyes.

"The truth is I'm jealous of Benz and Ros and everybody else who looks at you and loves you, sweet Io. I want you all to myself; it drives me wild to think of anyone having even a business claim on you."

"You want me to quit, Lanny? It's always for you to say, dear."

"I want you to do whatever makes you happy. I got all I could ask of life when you married me."

That was one of their high moments; they always had to climb down from those to the irking day-by-day levels. And the high moments did not come too often now.

Alan began to get a bit lonely without quite knowing it. Ione's preoccupation with her job and her housework left him to himself a great deal and he liked companionship.

He began taking Fluff to dinner, when Ione was working late on a new publicity campaign. One night he took her to a movie as well, and when Emma Sheppard recognized them in the theater, he hurried out with his vapid companion and left her in the street. He became careless about his hours at the office; he slept late and left at 4 o'clock; his friend Hill from Chicago occupied some of his lonesome evenings at the game; the little fund that Ione started for their rambling dream home in Lyall saw none of his share of the 50-50 arrangement that they planned; he even neglected caring for the current bills.

And then he went on vacation with his father at Ione's insistence. She missed him woefully the first three days, and then began to enjoy her enforced freedom. But when he returned, a day late—a day that seared itself into her mind, he became more carefree, less serious, less interested in his work. Fluff, when he was late, cared for his work as well as she could.

Ione thought that a maid might help, and installed Klarschen, efficient German not long in New York, after Lan admitted that he had taken Fluff to dinner. Thereafter the rooms were spotless, the dinners appetizing, the expenses ascendant. But Ione paid the added expense out of her own salary—for she told herself that she would be doing Klarschen's duties were she not downtown.

Night and day work followed as she prepared a new campaign. Anthony Ros, celebrated tenor, would deal with no one but Ione. Night appointments with him, of which she told Alan; appointments that annoyed her, but irritated Alan the more. Lines darkened her beautiful eyes; lines formed around her tender lips. Ten o'clock at night, still toiling in her office. Then Eddie Benz demanding that she bundle in his car that he might take her home. And then the ride through the sweet cool country beside Eddie.

A real friend, this big, understanding fellow. Sympathy like a caress. Not Alan's impatient, sweeping ardor—ah, Lan was dear! With a tiny bit more understanding—

She caught herself angrily. Comparing Lan with him—with anybody! Shouldn't have come here to do that! And she made her heart say to her mind, "Be quiet now; you say a thing again!"

She wondered, dimly, if it were disloyal to feel a thrill as they went into the beautiful inn at the river edge, sat down in the shaded light, listened to the golden strains of an orchestra.

Her first taste of luxury since she became Ione Blake; first velvet touch of richness stealing upon her so softly.

Magnificent person, this Eddie Benz. His silences, his way of guessing at her wishes. Black eyes watching, sending a great friendliness down into the still, mysterious depths of her heart.

He said, abruptly, "Are you happy, Ione?"

"Of course! What a dear you were to bring me!"

"I mean all the time—general proposition. Beautiful girl, did you ever think about the right of the individual?"

"Why—"

"A thing to be guarded, my dear. You say, 'Oh, I'll sing my right into that of this other; it's loyalty, it's love. Be unselfish; give up my own little comforts and happiness for this greater good.'

"Nonsense! Io one can protect another's happiness who does not protect his own. That's weakness. 'Love your neighbor as yourself' means he so fair to yourself you can't help being fair to others.

"Break down your own right and invite trespass makes others selfish. Think of that, my dear."

BEAUTY AND ADORNMENT

Need Beauty Be Adorned To Be Adored?

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

HAVE you ever seen a beautiful flower that has been tinted some other than its natural color? It's a lovely thing, and you exclaim over its beauty, BUT— "What a shame! It was SO lovely in its natural state!"

And that's just the way you feel sometimes when you see a lovely girl, so hidden by a mass of make-up and so disguised with jewels and fripperies that you simply cannot see the REAL girl.

Maybe she does it because it's style! Maybe she does it thinking it enhances her beauty! Maybe—oh, there a lot of WHYS—but if she only would stop to think for a second!

Beauty doesn't need a single thing to accentuate it. It needs no adornment, neither does it need a gorgeous setting. Beauty is beauty, whether you see it being presented at court or whether you glimpse it in a field against a background of Nature's loveliest creations.

For real Beauty is a thing of the soul, and no matter what the environment or background, it shines like a beacon attracting all to its welcoming beams.

So, you who possess Beauty—whether it be of feature or soul or nature—don't ever try to hide it under a bushel of make-up and artificiality. Let it shine out in all its gloriousness for all to see and Love. Ah, theres' the answer! Love seeks no adornment—rather, it gives an aura of beauty. So, if you seek Love, be NATURAL. In other words, BE YOURSELF!

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

LOVE'S THERMOMETER

MY DAUGHTER, by the light of the harvest moon many things are made clear. For by that time, do a man and a damsel know in their hearts whether the romance born of April sunsets and June moons is going to "take" or not.

Go to. It is easy for a damsel to be fair and for a man to be gallant by lamplight. But the acid test of a man's vows and a woman's charms is the good old midsummer-time!

* * *

Midsummer—when powder turneth to paste and rouge runneth down the cheek, and a man may spy a woman's real complexion and judge how she will stand the cold north light of a winter morning.

HELEN ROWLAND

When a woman may note how her beloved appeareth without a collar and discover whether the Lord or his tailor is responsible for his slender waistline.

When a man may teach a damsel to swim and discern how good a sport she is, and how much she oweth to Nature and how much to her modiste.

Or may take her camping and judge how good a cook, how good a scout and how good a pal she would make in a marital marathon.

When a damsel may note just how "helpful" or how fastidious a man is around a summer bungalow, and just how peevish he would be if the ants got into the pudding.

And a man may take a damsel fishing and observe how long she can KEEP SILENT at one time.

Yea, verily, Midsummer is the magic season, when a man and a maid discover whether 12 hours together seem like a "long, long day" or like a brief and glamorous interlude!

When a damsel may find out just how susceptible a man is to moonlight, scented silence, soft music and OTHER women, and learn whether or not she could trust him for all the summers to come—and just how FAR.

And when a man may judge whether or not a woman's kiss repayeth him for the exertion of catching the one-fifteen on a hot Saturday afternoon, when all the roof gardens are calling in his ears.

Verily, verily, the springtime is full of seductions and false promises, but the good old Summertime telleth no LIES!

And by Labor Day, a wise woman knoweth whether or not to order the orange blossoms; and a man knoweth whether or not to buy the platinum ring! For the Midsummer sun, and not the May moon, is the safest guide to love.

Horoscopes

Sunday, September 2.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds most propitious testimonies for the church, the clergy and all those in places of honor and authority. These may find advancement and many gratifying emoluments. There is augury for change and travel, but it is admonished that precaution against treachery be exercised.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a prosperous year with return for industry, perseverance and fidelity. Change or travel are likely, but there is also hint of duplicity.

A child born on this day should be enterprising, steady, dependable and may attain to position and possessions because of its excellent qualifications for responsibility.

Monday, September 3.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast favors new undertakings and promises expansion and steady growth for those who will use a modicum of precaution and good judgment. There may be spectacular personal experiences or in regard to writings or publications. Those in the employment of others should safeguard their positions.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of successful new ventures with growth of business and increased fortunes. But some prudence is called for against deceit.

A child born on this day may have many excellent qualities making for success and advancement in life. It may do some unique work in literature or art.

Health a Factor in Clear Thinking

WHAT this world needs more than anything else is straight thinking. You can't think straight unless you have a clean mind and a clear brain. These in turn depend on a clean body.

DR. COPELAND

In the last analysis, then, what you are and what you can give the world depends on your physical welfare.

We used to look upon insanity as a "psychological" thing. There was supposed to be something wrong with the spiritual or intangible part of the man, with his mind separate and apart from his body.

We don't accept this hopeless and helpless idea any more. No longer are we willing to submit to the thought that an "evil spirit" or some obscure mental kink is responsible for the disturbance. We know now that the unhappy victim cannot think straight because something is wrong with the physical part of the man.

The other day I was at the Bear Mountain Boy Scout camp. Gov. Smith was making his annual inspection of this great institution. Dear old Uncle Dan Beard addressed the scouts and so did Commander Richard Byrd.

All these men emphasize, and properly so, I believe, the importance of the healthy body. It is rare, indeed, for a man to achieve any sort of success in life unless he has a reasonable degree of health. His thinking is less likely to be straight without it.

Sometimes we fail to place correct value on the things we do and the things we possess. We endure certain defects, regarding them as inevitable perhaps, or at least as not worth our while to overcome.

For instance, nobody likes to be fat, but why? For the looks of it! But that isn't a sufficient reason. When you come to measure excessive fatness in terms of lessened efficiency and shortened life, it becomes a matter to cry over and not to laugh at. It isn't a matter of looks—it relates to your very life. It interferes with straight thinking. It makes you "lazy" and sleepy and dull. It lessens your usefulness.

The care you give your body, not to make it look attractive, but to make it a perfectly functioning machine, will determine largely what sort of thinking you will do.

The other day I read about a famous actor who takes as much as 10 hours to "make up" his face for some part he is play. I have an idea that some of the women I have seen in my day have taken little less time in their make-up.

But this isn't the sort of treatment I have in mind. Several hours every day devoted to exercise and fresh air, with the improvement of the circulation and muscular development, are a sort of "make-up" that will fit you for life in mental, social and professional battles, as well as the improvement of your personal appearance. This practice will help you to think straight.

Criminal tendencies, bad thoughts and practices, as well as lesser evils, will be reduced to the vanishing point when men and women, boys and girls, care for their bodies as they should. Length of life and the quality of life will be promoted by care of the health. Right thinking follows as a matter of course.

To think straight you must live straight.

Madge Tells Eleanor She Is Aware of Her Identity

I MUST not let Eleanor Lincoln give her confidence to me until she had time to give a second and calmer thought to her resolve to tell me the secret which was so troubling her. This was the realization which came to me as I heard her voice tremulously saying that she could trust me, and that she must tell somebody. But I conquered a distinct temptation to take her instantly at her word, as I loosened her twisting hands from mine and said gently but firmly:

"Indeed, you shall tell me anything you wish, but not just now. You are too much excited. Lie still and think things over a bit while I go to your Aunt Anna's room and see how she is."

She looked up at me with a mutinous mouth and determined eyes.

"I shall not change my mind," she said, "but do go to see my poor Anna. She isn't my aunt, though. I might as well begin by telling you that. She's—"

But I was already at the door, and she did not finish the sentence. I hurried along the corridor to the sick-room of the woman who was supposed to be Eleanor Lincoln's "Aunt Anna." The door was wide open in order to admit all the air possible, and as I neared it I heard a low muttering. I stood motionless at the door for several seconds before I could distinguish the sounds in syllables of a name continually repeated, "Lena, Lena, Lena."

The nurse turned and, seeing me, came toward me swiftly and silently. The husband of the sick woman seated at the bedside, did not look up, but kept shaking his head in a sort of mournful negative accompaniment to the call from the sick woman.

"Do you know these people?" the nurse asked. "Have you any idea who 'Lena' is?"

"I only know them as neighbors since they came here in the spring," I replied in equally low tones. "But I will ask Miss Lincoln about it."

The old man sprang suddenly to his feet and started toward us.

"You ask my—my—niece nodings," he said, fiercely. "She not know. My vife she shust talk foolishness. Dere isg no 'Lena.'"

The nurse wheeled and sent a withering look over him.

"If you speak above a whisper in this room again," she said in icy tones that yet could not have been heard by the sick woman, "I shall tell the doctor that you cannot stay here."

He glared at her for an instant, then without a word went back to his place by his wife's bedside. The nurse walked with me into the hall, closing the door after her.

"If Miss Lincoln knows who 'Lena' is, find out if it is possible to get her here," she said. "I thought at first the woman meant her niece, but the uncle tells me her name is Eleanor."

"I'll ask her about it," I said, "but I'd like to wait a little while. She's not in very good shape."

"There's no particular hurry," the nurse replied. "It would do no good to bring 'Lena' or anyone else while she is in this delirium. But if, when she comes back to consciousness, she still longs for 'Lena' it will be highly desirable to grant her wish."

"I'll ask her about it during the next hour and let you know," I promised, and left her. For almost half an hour I talked with Mrs. Tiger downstairs, and then went back to Eleanor Lincoln, to find her waiting for me with flushed face and eyes which betrayed the terror which was consuming her.

"I thought you weren't coming back," she said, "and I mustn't wait any longer to tell you. You must listen. To begin with, my name is not Eleanor Lincoln. I've been deceiving you all. I really am the —"

She stopped hesitantly, fearfully, and searched my face. I laid my hand upon her reassuringly.

"Perhaps it would help," I said quietly, "if I told you that I already know you are the Princess Olina of Transvania."

Hailed before Justice of the Peace George B. He was held for court in connection with the automobile theft.

Sinclair accused Robert McCullough, 15, of Green street, and Dale Bible, 15, of Union avenue, of being with him when he took the machine of John E. Witherspoon, of 526 North avenue. He also named Lawrence Haffley, 16, of North Braddock avenue, as an accomplice in the theft of athletic equipment from the Westinghouse High School. The others will be arraigned later.

He Turns His Attention To New Problems When World War Ends

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

His Royal Highness, Edward, Prince of Wales, heir to the British throne, was born at White Lodge, Richmond, in midsummer of 1894. Guilty of much mischief during his childhood days, he was often punished. When he grew older he was sent to Osborne Naval College. Investiture of his title took place at Carnarvon Castle, in Wales. After leaving Osborne he was sent to Oxford to begin his university education. During the war he became a captain in the army and went to France, but was prohibited from fighting.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

EDWARD P.

By WALTER and LEONARD TOWNSEND

CHAPTER X.

The Prince and the War.

THOSE who have come in contact with the Prince and who know him intimately cannot but pay tribute to his well balanced mind and orderliness. Hearing of the attempts in England to defeat the German blockade by the intensive cultivation of small holdings, the Prince at once inaugurated a scheme in the Duchy of Cornwall Estate at Dartmouth and had the satisfaction of seeing several acres of the largest enclosures of grass-land prepared for food cultivation.

PRINCE OF WALES

The idea of commencing farming on extensive lines on the Prince's Cornish estates had been first mooted, however, early in 1913, and operations had commenced then. Crops had been sown and cattle installed in the pasture lands, but the Prince had, owing to subsequent activities, been compelled to devote his time to other interests than farming. He mentioned, while in Paris before the war, that nothing would please him better—if he had to have a landsman's life—than to settle down as a gentleman farmer! Since, he has been able, to some extent, to realize this ambition in his ranch in Canada.

The Prince celebrated his twenty-first birthday at the front and asked that all congratulations, public or otherwise should be postponed until the conclusion of the war.

For the same reason, the Prince decided not to make any appointments to his household.

The King of Italy conferred upon the Prince the Order of the Annunziata, carrying with it the relationship of cousin to His Majesty of Italy.

During the four years of the war, the Prince of Wales never stayed away from the various fronts for long. He paid several flying visits home but he made good use of his time spent in England. He visited the hospitals for the wounded, attended the meetings of public bodies and traveled from one end of the country to the other fulfilling public duties. Although he was so young he gained no little reputation for delivering forcible war speeches.

Rush Visits Home

In January, 1917, the Prince made one of his frequent rush visits to England to attend the meeting of the Prince of Wales Committee for the care of Soldiers' War graves held at the War Office.

A few weeks later the Prince brought over dispatches from Sir John French to the Secretary of the State for War and then stole two or three days' well-earned leave in the peace of Windsor Castle before returning once more to the Front.

The ordinary rank of soldiers would have quickly discerned in the Prince's activities among them any hint of condescension and would have quickly detected any attempt on his part to "mix" with them on any but a downright comradely basis. When the Prince asked for a light for his cigaret or asked for a cigaret, it was not because he wished to be considered friendly, but he really needed a smoke or a light.

The Prince took a great delight in inspecting troops during the war, whether they were soldiers, sailors, boy-scouts or civil organizations.

After his short leave in the autumn of 1917, the Prince of Wales returned to his duties with reenforced vigor. "He is only a boy, but he has a tremendous lot of courage," wrote a soldier to his family, discussing his meeting with the Prince.

Early in February, 1918, the Prince returned to Buckingham Palace from Sir H. Plumer's headquarters in Italy to take his seat in the House of Lords.

The Prince now began an exhaustive tour of industrial areas; South Wales was the starting

FEAR OF PARALYSIS KEEPS BALTIMORE SCHOOLS SHUT

BALTIMORE, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Baltimore's public schools will remain closed until September 17, instead of opening next Wednesday, the school board announces, following a meeting at which parents declared they were afraid to have their children start to school with the present prevalency of infantile paralysis.

The board, in announcing the postponement, explained that the action was taken at request of the parents, and not because it feared any spread of the malady.

In that stand, the board and Dr. C. Hampson Jones, health commissioner, concurred, declaring the children stood a better chance of escaping the disease while under the supervision of trained physicians than they would be in their homes, where isolation was impossible.

During the last few days a decided decrease has been shown in the number of cases of the disease reported, both in the city and the state.

ILLS. MINERS, OWNERS PUBLISH SCALE TODAY

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Illinois coal operators and miners have reached a wage agreement expected to affect future agreements in Pennsylvania, Indiana and Iowa. A joint sub-committee will make its terms public today.

"The joint sub-committee has reached an agreement and ironed out its difficulties in the best interests of the public," Harry Fishwick, president of the state miners, said. "The terms of the agreement now will be reported to the full joint scale committee."

John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, who attended the conference, said that mining territories not yet working under agreement were awaiting the results of the Illinois pact. Pennsylvania, Iowa and Indiana would be affected, he said.

W. J. Jenkins, chairman of the joint conference, and president of the Coal Operators Association of Illinois, said it appeared certain the work of the sub-committees would meet with the approval of the miners and operators generally, although it might require a month more for the completion of additional formalities before the mines could reopen and the miners return to work.

It was understood that the new wage scale was somewhat lower than the Jacksonville agreement, which called for $7.50 a day and $1.08 a ton. Unconfirmed reports said the scale was about $6.10 a day and 80 to 90 cents a ton.

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, if you can't, will help you a bit. Each day there is published the photograph of one of the city's traffic officers. Here is one for today. His name tomorrow!

42 SUITS FOR DIVORCES BEGUN HERE IN ONE DA

Judge Thomas D. Carnahan, of Common Pleas Court, yesterday signed 42 libels in divorce calling for the issuing of subpenas—almost a record-breaking number in one day.

The libels were presented so frequently that when any attorney approached the bar of the court Judge Carnahan inquired if he, too, had a libel to present. Desertion and cruel and barbarous treatment were the principal charges.

Among those presented was one by Mrs. Estelle M. Pearce, 217 Beaver street, Edgeworth, one of the fashionable neighborhoods of the Sewickley valley. She charges her husband, David J. Pearce, endangered her life and treated her cruelly. The couple were married December 19, 1904.

Mrs. Lethlan Ling Sippel, 4153 Murray avenue, charges George R. Sippel, Morrowfield Apartments, with cruel and barbarous treatment. They were married March 21, 1921. She asserts Sippel endangered her life.

Mrs. Kathleen Smith, 5815 Rippey street, filed a libel against Ralph Smith, charging cruel treatment. The couple were married in 1923.

Edgar S. Neyhard, 280 Chartiers avenue, Crafton, charges Lillian M. Neyhard with cruel and barbarous treatment. The couple were married in 1908.

PITTSBURGH ON GIANT AIRWAY SYSTEM

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 1.—Plans are in the making for a gigantic net-work of airways for handling passenger, freight, mail and express service, extending from New York to the principal cities of the west and south, according to an announcement made here yesterday by Warren B. Ferris, chief engineer of the Seaboard Airways Inc., of New York. The system, according to Ferris, will include New York, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Kansas City, on the western route, and Norfolk, Charleston, Jacksonville, Miami and Havana, Cuba, on the south.

In conference with D. V. Stratton, general manager of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation's Wheeling factory, Ferris is negotiating for nine trimotor Fokker super-planes to be used on the western division. He said that Belanca trimotor planes probably would be used on the southern route. It was announced that the radio control system would be used on both routes as a safety measure.

Passing Drivers Quarrel; One Stabbed

Anthony Graney, 20, of 648 Corney avenue, Braddock, is in Braddock General Hospital in a critical condition, stabbed last night by an unidentified Negro with whom he had quarreled. The two men, both driving machines, met in a narrow alley near Sixth street and Maple way, Braddock, and neither would turn out for the other. The argument was finally ended and the machines had passed when the Negro leaped out, stabbed Graney and drove away.

MY DEAR SIR: For some time I have intended to write to you and tell you how much I enjoy your column, but I have a habit of putting things off and would probably not be writing now were it not for your nice tribute to the Scottish race the other evening.

It is time someone came to the rescue of my race. It would not do very well for us to defend ourselves, but we appreciate it when a person of another race does it for us. I have not the slightest doubt there are tight, stingy Scotsmen, but I think upon investigation it would be found that they are Lowlanders. I defy anyone to find a Highlander small in any respect (except possibly physically). Highlanders are above pettiness in any form. Now I do not say that all Lowlanders are low, but I do say that all Highlanders are high.

There is a vast difference between the two divisions of Scottish people. I might add that I am of Highland descent! All joking aside, I could name several races more careful about money than the Scottish race—and I am now including the Lowlanders and the Highlanders—and I might add that no other race in the world takes smilingly the silly, tiresome jokes we hear about ourselves every day.

Now that that's off my mind, I can tell you how much I enjoy reading your column. My husband, my sister and I read it the first thing every evening. It is always sane, humorous and tolerant. The only time I did not like it was when you got on the subject of fishing and kept it up every evening for a week—and it was away over my head. But that phase passed and I am glad, because I have liked it ever so much better the last week or so.

The time you talked about being a "super" in Robert Mantell's company reminded me of my own experiences in that line. I was a page and carried Caesar's train in the play, Julius Caesar. Mantell was Brutus. Several boys from Tech constituted the mob. They became rather unmanageable and mixed laughter with their howls in one scene. When the curtain came down Mantell turned around and gave the whole crowd a terrible scolding.

After that the foolishness ceased. I felt like the star of the piece when I stood behind Caesar, in the spotlight, but unfortunately some of my best friends in the audience did not see me. Signed: Murdena MacGregor Adams.

At this point we should recall a Scotch joke but for the life of us we can't remember one now. The only one we know is about two Irishmen. It seems there were two Irishmen, Pat and Mike, and . . . but you've probably heard that one.

A HAY FEVER victim reports that the ailment steals on you gradually, insidiously. He says his first two years were pleasant ones—he sneezed ever so slightly and his nose simply jogged along. But in what might be called his junior and senior years—the last two years—the thing has become terrible.

In telling us this he suddenly made a face—as it scared. We turned around to see where he was looking. He wasn't looking at anything. He was making ready for a great, big dandy sneeze, but it did not eventuate, and his face slipped then into a dejected, disappointed pose. The next moment he grabbed his nose. It was in the act of running away, so to speak. And a second later tears began dropping from red eyes.

We had such a good time we asked him if we could stay around for an hour or so. His face seemed to say: "Wha-at?" and then he sneezed. We did stay in his suite all night. We never went to sleep, just sat there counting the sneezes. His best record was between 3 and 4 in the morning, when he rang up an even 200 out of 204 attempts.

Gil Rogers Says

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Sept. 1.

Did you read about the wonderful reception that Ireland gave Mr. Kellogg? That's a mighty fine omen when Ireland comes out for peace.

Vice Presidential Joe Robinson made an awful good acceptance speech in Little Rock. I don't mean to detract in any way from either of our fine presidential men, but I tell you both parties have got just about as good vice presidents as could be had, and that's not taking anything away from Charley Dawes.

Charley wasted as fine a talent, as has been wasted in years, on a job that is really nothing but watchful waiting.

Yours, WILL.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

Spang Company Gets Big Order—Coal Prices Continue to Drop—Production Trend Upward.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE Arkansas Natural Gas Corporation has placed an order for 66 miles of 10-inch seamless line pipe with Spang, Chalfant & Co. Production of the pipe will be started next week.

The exact destination of the pipe was not known here, but it is understood that it will be used to link the newly developed gas field in the Arkansas Valley with the company's lines at Middle Rock.

THE extension of the line is part of the improvement program started by Arkansas Natural Gas to balance the production and distribution properties required in the recent merger. The development included the purchase of an interest in the Cherokee Natural Gas Line Company from the Dixie Gulf Pipe Line Company for a price of about $1,200,000 a few months ago.

Coal prices have dropped to the lowest levels attained in years, coal selling for from 75 cents to $1 a ton.

THE strength in the coal market expected by many in the trade has not materialized. The closing of the lake season will throw the output of many mines into the general market, and it now seems unlikely that domestic demand will compensate for this.

The making of peace between operators and the union is taking place in many fields. This production will contribute to market weakness. In the Pittsburgh field little trouble has been experienced recently in securing men to work on a non-union basis. The union has been badly beaten here.

The idle mines in the Pittsburgh district are remaining closed more on account of market conditions than because of the strike. It is unlikely that any peace will be made with the union by local operators.

THE ending of the strike will mark the first time in which the entire industry has been on competitive wage scales for five years.

Since 1922 there has been an enormous growth in capacity in West Virginia and other nonunion fields. Late in 1924 the union mines began to drop out of the race for business, as competition from open-shop mines became too hot. As the nonunion production fell off, the nonunion production grew to a point at which it supplied most of the country's needs.

AT NO time during the past five years have both union and nonunion groups of mines been on an equal footing. The end of the strike has solved the wage problem only to create a new dilemma. Both of these groups will be struggling for business.

The prospect from the standpoint of the operators is anything but good with most of the producers have been forced out of the race or until operators see the folly of price cutting.

THE losses now being shown in the coal industry eventually will act as an influence towards the end of the price war.

It is to be hoped that the operators will not take advantage of the union weakness to further reduce wages. At present wages in the Pittsburgh district are considerably higher than in many of the West Virginia and Kentucky properties.

These neighboring fields were responsible for the strike. Their wage-cutting tactics forced the northern fields to fight the union. It is unlikely that operators here will take the initiative in wage cutting.

The production of crude petroleum in the United States during July as announced by the Bureau of Mines amounted to 75,426,000 barrels representing a daily average of 2,433,100 barrels or an increase over the daily average output in June of 15,500 barrels. "The majority of the states, including the important producing states of California and Oklahoma," the statement said, "reported decreased output in July but these declines were more than overbalanced by the West Texas district where the daily average output increased approximately 50,000 barrels. The various fields of the West Texas district produced an average of 365,000 barrels per day in July as compared with 262,000 barrels for the Seminole district." Total stocks of crude and refined oils on July 31, totaled 612,052,000 barrels, as against 613,348,000 barrels on June 30, 613,386,000 on May 31, and 571,386,000 barrels on July 31, 1927. M. J. Meehan Bullish.

Business in the United States has turned the corner for the better and it looks as though we will experience one of the greatest bull markets in the history of the stock exchange during the coming autumn, states M. J. Meehan, a member of the New York Stock Exchange, who is visiting Montreal with Harold A. Richardson, of Harris, Winthrop and Company. "In my opinion," he stated, "all high class stocks should be bought on any reaction. Especially does this refer to U. S. Steel, New York Central and many specialties, amongst which may be mentioned Radio, General Motors, Studebaker, Fox Films and one of the better tobacco stocks." Mr. Meehan is the broker credited with engineering the sensational rise in Radio several months ago and is generally thought to have amassed a fortune of several million dollars on the operation.

National Biscuit.

The National Biscuit Company, based on earnings to date, will enjoy a record year, according to those in position to know. The third quarter is usually the most profitable period of the year. It is likely net profit for these three months will run in excess of $4,600,000, equal, after preferred dividends to around $2.8 a share on 2,209,520 common shares outstanding. For nine months net income should approximate $13,000,000, or $5.30 a common share. For the full year, it is indicated, earnings will run ahead of the showing of $7.10 a share for 1927. This will more than cover the common dividend requirements of $6 a share and the extra of 50 cents declared in July. It would not be surprising if another extra were declared later in the year, particularly if earnings should exceed present expectations.

Arthur Cutten, Chicago financier, is quoted to the effect that he knows nothing of the reported plans of the so-called Cutten group to obtain control of Loose Wiles Biscuit in the open market. Common shares of the Loose Wiles Company, the second largest manufacturer of biscuits and fancy crackers in the country, sold today above 82 on the New York Stock Exchange, although they have sold as low as $44.25 this year. There are 500,000 common shares outstanding, all of which is certain that a 100-lb. keg. August is the first month since the beginning of November, 1927, in which France did not receive gold from this country. The gold movement during August was the smallest for imports and exports for any month since August, 1927. The steel industry in Northeastern Ohio enters September with production schedules above 80 per cent. PROFIT-TAKING HALTS STOCK ROCKETING

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(AP.)—Heavy week-end profit-taking interrupted the resumption of the strong upward price movement on the New York Stock Exchange today, but not until after more than a score of issues had been lifted to new high ground. Early gains ranged from 1 to 6 points with trading in enormous volume.

The market started off at a brisk pace set by large scale pool operators, supplemented by extensive public participation. Toward the end of the first hour waves of selling swept through the market and traders reduced their commitments and took profits over the holidays. This selling had been anticipated in view of the sharp advances in prices earlier in the week and good support was provided for most issues.

Motor stocks again were heavily bought. Hupp and Chrysler were pushed up to new high levels; Studebaker ran up a few points on a block of 24,800 shares of Nash was made at 96¾, an extreme gain of 6 points. General Motors, which recorded a spectacular advance yesterday, fell back on realizing.

National Cash Register continued to respond to reports of expanding earnings by crossing 89 to a new high record. Barnsdall "A" sold above 28 for the first time this year in anticipation of resumption of dividends in October.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Smaller deliveries of wheat than had been generally looked for on the first delivery day under September contracts had a bullish effect on the market today. Wheat opened ⅝ to ¾c higher, with moderate buying later helping to hold prices up. Corn, too, had a firmer appearance with some short covering in September. There were no receipts of corn on the current month contract. The opening quotations were ⅝ to ¾c higher for future months, with September at ⅝ to 1¼c advance. September and December oats were a little easier at the outset, but hardened in the early dealings. Provisions were unsettled, September lard starting 7 to 15c under Friday's close.

QUIET WEEK-END SESSION ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

WINDOW GLASS MACHINE PFD. SCORES GOOD GAIN

There were no special developments on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the short week-end session today. Prices were practically unchanged throughout the list and volume of business was about at the average maintained throughout the week.

Several small-lot sales of Standard Sanitary Manufacturing were recorded early in the session, with the price holding at 36¼, the price at which it left off last night. There has been no noticeable pressure on the stock this week, but the price has shown a slightly lower tendency.

Suburban Electric Development was firm but rather quiet. This concern is the local distributor of the Frigidaire and other products of the Delco Light Company, subsidiary of General Motors. The stock was recently listed on the local board, selling around 19 shortly after listing, but later receding to around 17. It is rumored that directors intend placing the shares on a dividend basis in the near future.

A little strength in the American Window Glass issues made its appearance in the last half hour when American Window Glass Company preferred sold at 83, equal to the last previous sale price, and several odd lots of American Window Glass Machine Company preferred were handled at 38, a gain of two points over yesterday's close. Better outlook for the glass industry generally, and the reports of a big Ford order for American Window Glass Company, were the factors behind the advance. American Window Glass Machine Company owns the common stock of the American Window Glass Company.

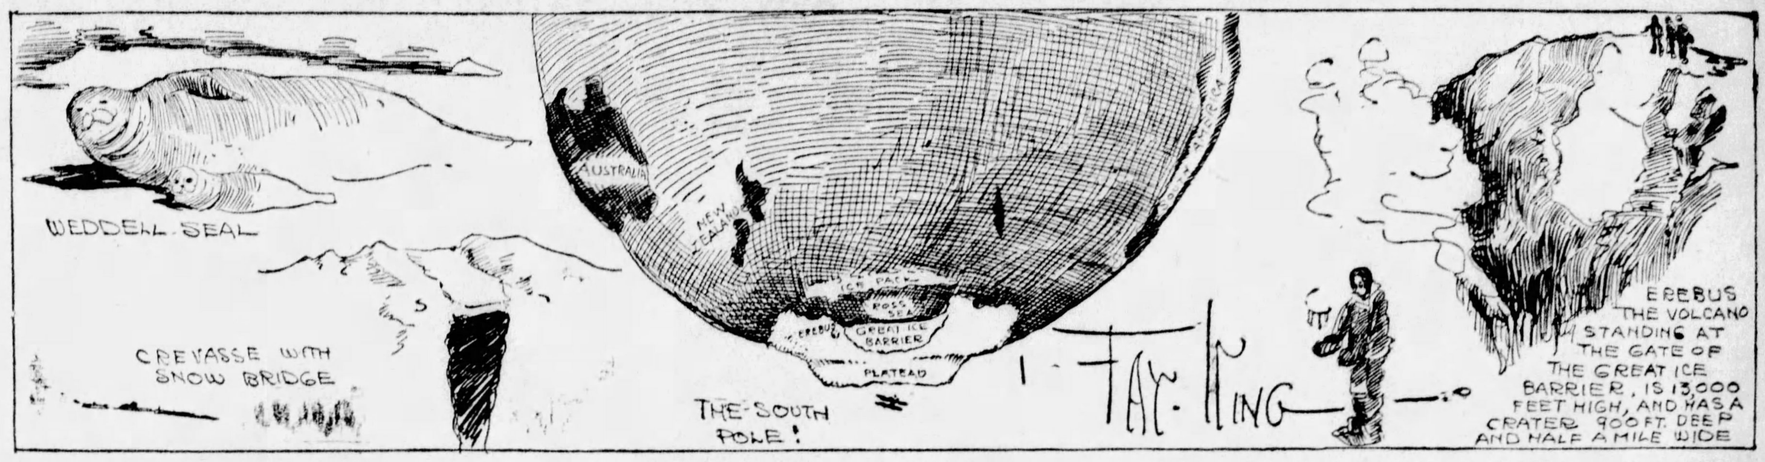
Fay King "Explores" Antarctic to Find Icy Winds Never Cease



By FAY KING

COMMANDER BYRD hopes to fly over the South Pole.

The South Pole is on a high plateau which rises to almost 10,000 feet, but about 90 miles from the Pole it begins to decline.

The altitude at the Pole is about 1,000 feet lower.

Strong winds never cease to blow there.

The South Pole is colder than the North Pole. Only whales, seals, penguins, gulls and petrels are to be found near.

There are no people like the Eskimos at the North Pole.

The terrific winds often reach a velocity of 100 miles an hour.

Crevasses which are bridged over at the top with snow and ice, are the greatest danger of the ice fields. Some are 200 feet wide.

KNIGHTS OF ST. GEORGE GET HOME

SUN-TELEGRAPH CRITIC BRINGS GIFT FROM ROME

Monsignore Godfrey Winter Baumgarten, now one of the best known clergy in Rome, born in the West End district, Pittsburgh, is responsible for the gift of a $500,000 building to the Knights of St. George of America to be used as their Roman headquarters. Commendatore Fedele Migliore, wealthy citizen of Rome, makes the gift through his friendship for the Monsignore, and George Seibel, drama and literary editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, on his return from Italy, brings the message of the presentation to the Knights here. In the group in the Vatican Gardens are (left to right) Enrico Quattrini, sculptor of the Vatican; Charles Martel, of the Congressional Library, Washington, who is cataloging the Vatican collections; Monsignore Baumgarten; Mr. Seibel, and Alessandro Quattrini, son of the sculptor.

The Prince of Wales
His Story

point and he was received amidst great acclamations. His next visit was to the Cornwall Estates of the Duchy. Here he spent a busy day inspecting the Wolfram mine at Kit Hill. He donned an overall and a miner's hat to which a Davy lamp was fastened, and walked through an underground cutting into an actual mine, stopping on the way to pay his "footing." This is an old Cornish custom and consists in having one's boots wiped by the oldest miner present on paymemnt of 2-6d. During his inspection of the mine he used a hand-drill and chatted freely with the workers. He stayed for lunch at the mine buildings and had the pleasure of meeting his brother Prince George whom he had not seen for 18 months. Prince George was still at Dartmouth. After a brief visit to Plymouth, the Prince returned to London to be present at an entertainment of the soldiers' children in the East End.

From London, the Prince now journeyed to the Clyde industrial area on a plea for more ships. While there he visited all the chief naval and mercantile works and shipyards and had a special word of congratulation for a group of survivors from torpedoed vessels.

While on the Clyde, the Prince associated freely with the workers and drove a steel rivet into a ship's plate, remarking that though the work looked easy enough, it was jolly hard.

Anniversary Speaker

May 1918, represented the third anniversary of the entry of Italy into the war as an ally of Great Britain. England had arranged, some months before the date, that some member of the Royal Family would be present at the quiet ceremony which was to take place on that day in Rome. When the time came, however, the King found it impossible to leave his duties and the Prince of Wales was deputized to leave for Italy.

The young Prince, wearing the khaki uniform of a British officer, arrived in Rome on May 23.

The crowds which lined the streets marking the route the Prince was to travel, cheered long and madly as he passed. As his car traveled alongside the Massimo Hospital for wounded soldiers, the convalescents crowded to the windows, waving their hands and shouting their greetings to the distinguished visitor below.

The ceremony of the anniversary took place the following day in the Augusteum Hall, and the building was packed to overflowing. After the National anthems of each of the Allies had been rendered, and a hearty welcome to the Prince of Wales had been given, he was called upon to speak.

Wild cheers broke out when the slight figure of Edward rose to address the crowd from the royal box. He said in part:

"I proudly proclaim my conviction that the great object for which our two nations are fighting against the forces of reaction is inevitably destined to triumph, owing to the union of which our meeting this evening is symbolic."

His Part in War

Prince Edward took risks in France, but they were, as far as possible, minimized; he would be the last to say it. That is why he referred to "my insignificent part in the war." But there was no need for any apologia on the part of the sensitive young Prince. No one expected the heir to the throne to wield a bayonet or shoulder a rifle. Probably if he had done—and his wishes on this subject have never been doubted—the actual influences both on the result of the war and the morale of the troops would have been insignificant compared with that which his presence alone effected. It was a harder task for the Prince of Wales to reconcile himself to his "safety" duties than actual fighting would have been.

The Prince's part in the war cannot rightly be judged at its true value by the Prince himself.

Whatever his private views upon the subject, the whole world knows that he played his delicate, uncolorful, arduous part as only it could have been played by a man whose heart was in the right place and whose star was the star of duty and service to his fellowmen.

The Great European struggle was over.

Now he wished to be accepted as a man. He had won his spurs. Had he not mixed with men too long and too freely to be ever restricted as he had been in those peaceful years before 1914? His experiences had made a lasting influence upon him. Henceforth, though he may be called the Prince of Wales, he would always remain "the People's Prince!"

He exhibited the keenest interest in the welfare of repatriated prisoners of war. On November 17 he attended in person at Dover and met a transport of 800 men recently released from German internment camps. The prisoners, as they left the boat, were formed into lines along the pier front, and the Prince walked down the files chatting with the men and questioning them with regard to their experience and their future plans.

He realized that the time was not far distant when he would have to bid goodbye to the soldiers who had been his friends. He expressed the wish to be allowed to spend Christmas with the troops abroad. No one was really surprised, therefore, to read in the newspapers on Christmas Eve, 1918, that "the Prince of Wales is staying in Brussels, incognito."

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

THE Prince welcomed Peace as much as any of the war-tired soldiers he had served with in France, but with his characteristic farsightedness he did not waste time in joining in the peace festivities but at once turned his attention to the problems which he knew his country would be faced with on the coming of peace.

He realized as much as anyone else that the return of the glory-covered troops from France would be quickly followed by the dangerous question of employment, pensions and the care of those whom war had maimed and crippled for life.

One of his first cares was to show his great appreciation as heir to the throne to all the hardy colonials who had rallied to their country's call. During the few months after the cessation of hostilities H. R. H. dashed between the various British colonial and Allied headquarters both in England and France. Not only did he just want to say "Thank you for your services to England," but also to get to know personally the various colonial people whom he was later to visit during his tours as England's ambassador.

If Pirates Fail Let's Root for Bill McKechnie

Pittsburgh says goodby today to Bill McKechnie and his St. Louis Cardinals. Pittsburgh fans would like to see the Pirates beat out Bill McKechnie's Cardinals, but if the Pirates cannot win, then most of us want to see Bill McKechnie come through.

We are not especially versed in the baseball virtues or vices of Bill McKechnie, but we know that he is a hometown man who long has been a credit to his community.

Bill McKechnie directed the 1925 Pirates to a pennant. Then he lost his job in a civil war on the club. He had to knock at the league's doors, asking for work, only a year after he had directed a club to a world's championship. He caught on with the Cardinals and soon advanced to the managerial post. In his first year he is making a strong bid for another flag.

Because he took his bad luck philosophically and his good luck gracefully, Bill McKechnie has many rooters in his home town. If the Pirates fail us, here's three cheers for Wilkinsburg Bill.

Know How to WAIT

That's ONE Secret of Success.

This shows the end of the 10,000 meters race in the Olympic games. The man on the left is Ritola, who finished second. On the right is Paavo Nurmi; he won.

saving himself with the race well in hand, was heels of his rival, letting the rival race before him, the final spurt, holding back for it.

When the moment came, Nurmi put into his powerful lungs, heart and muscles everything that he had, flashed past Ritola, the leader, and won the race.

For the thoughtful man, the moral is:
DON'T ALWAYS BE IN A HURRY.
LEARN HOW TO WAIT.
This does not mean, learn how to LOAF.
Loafing, unfortunately, requires no learning.

DON'T OUTRUN YOURSELF EITHER PHYSICALLY OR MENTALLY.

Keep within your powers, always save something FOR A LAST EFFORT.

This applies to social life and business life. Don't try to rush out ahead from the start. Hold back, let somebody else do the leading.

4,000,000 New Cars Yearly

Yes, We Need Them.

In this prosperous land, automobiles are built and junked in great numbers. In 1927 more than 2,300,000 cars were abandoned, or broken up for parts, as compared with 3,393,000 new cars manufactured.

Some organization should solve the difficult used car problem by arranging to dump used cars in foreign markets at low prices. If the few big companies would combine they could do it.

Encouraging to motor men and oil men is the fact that Americans are learning to give their cars real use, for business time saving, as well as for week-end recreation.

In 1927 the number of registered cars increased less than 5 per cent, while use of gasoline by motors increased 13 per cent.

Twenty-three million one hundred and twenty-five thousand one hundred automobiles were registered in 1927; 1,078,087 more than in 1926. Mr. Ford's estimate that we need 4,000,000 new cars per year is low.

Mussolini's Question

No One Asks It About Him.

Mussolini asks: "Who is Hoover and Smith? Which is dry and which is wet?"

A few years ago Hoover and Smith would have asked: "Who is Mussolini?" Nobody asks that now.

Perhaps a day will come when nobody in the world "from Peking to Paris and from Paris to Rome" will ask who the winner of this presidential election is.

To be known, make yourself known—Mussolini did it.

Getting a Line on How They'll Run

O. O. McINTYRE In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 1.—The amazing growth of Los Angeles is due largely to its low cost of living. People can live more cheaply here perhaps than in any other first-class city. This is responsible for the large number of retired farmers and those who have a small but regular income.

For those who know how to buy, food is more than 50 per cent cheaper than it is in New York. The innumerable serve-yourself cafeterias are almost embarrassing with their modest prices. One may have everything—from potage to pecans—for less than a dollar. And there is, of course, no tipping.

There are excellent furnished apartments on the edge of the downtown district for rent from $50 to $100 a month. The same class of apartments in similar neighborhoods in New York would bring from $175 to $225 a month. Fine furnished homes are available in aristocratic areas for $250 a month.

These include large front lawns, flower and vegetable gardens, garages and the services of a gardener. On Hill street today I noticed a sign: "Three-room furnished apartment with radio—$35 a month." Dollar-a-day hotels are on every hand — clean, comfortable and rather imposing.

Salaries are not as high as in the East and Middle West, but living is proportionately far less expensive. The clerk, the small shopkeeper and others of the so-called white collar class are able to live in quaint cottages with yards and porches and maintain automobiles.

Another saving item, due to climatic conditions, is that one need not buy coal. Artificial warmth is seldom necessary and when it is gas and electric heaters suffice. The dearth of smoke and soot and general cleanliness of the city bring the laundry bill down to a minimum.

The favorite amusement is the movie and they are extremely reasonable. Ladies are admitted free to ball games. Garage storage ranges from $10 to $20 a month, but the average is $12.50 with summer rates. Bell boys, newsies and elevator operators ride in their own cars.

Pershing Square is the Los Angeles Madison Square. In the very heart of the city, it attracts an odd conglomeration of humanity's riff raff. There are professional hoboes, soap box orators, beggars and jobless. Also leaders of sundry cults, lady realtors who invite you for sight-seeing bus rides, movie extras, peripatetic preachers and myriad roamers motivated by a consuming wanderlust.

The vogue for sawed-off stockings among Los Angeles flappers must worry hosiery manufacturers. Not every sock is a boost out here.

Magnetic Hill near town is a winding roadway presenting at one point the optical illusion of mounting upward when you are really coasting down hill. Broadway has often offered the same phenomenon.

Los Angeles has no sky piercing buildings. They are restricted, save for a city building that is some 30 stories high, to a certain height—about 14 stories. This gives the city a uniformity agreeable to the eye.

* * *

Fire wagons siren gigantic moans that are enough to awaken the dead. Newcomers often leap into their clothes in the middle of the night, only to learn an awning is afire a half mile away.

* * *

Loquacious strangers drift up and talk to you as though they might have known you all their lives. The majority are those who have left their small towns to live on their savings and are touched by loneliness and the garrulity of old age. Evrywhere you see the old folk on porches rocking in valitudinarian ease. If one has reached the rocking chair age this is the spot. Unless, of course, they provide one of those modernistic rockers.

Why Labor Day?

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Labor Day, no matter what it really means to most of us, was inaugurated as a sop to the laborite and a protest against the capitalistic system.

As a matter of fact there is no capitalistic party and no labor party except in our imaginations. In productivity, in which we are all engaged, capital and labor are inextricably interwoven.

The Victor Hugoesque idea of labor consisting of millions of people who have nothing or are in rags, and the capitalists as rolling in wealth and living upon the earnings of their poorer brethren has no foundation in fact. That condition existed in the Middle Ages when everything depended upon manual labor. Nowadays we are living in the age of machinery, and manual labor, as such, is becoming less and less important.

The principal thing now is for a man to know how to manage a machine or to control the great forces that work for mankind.

Electricity and steam are doing the work today of the tattered millions of yesterday, and where those powers are most used is in the United States, where we have the fewest degraded people. You will find the most of such people in China, where there is little power used.

When you go to hunt for the laborer in the United States he is pretty hard to find; that is, it is hard to find the man who has nothing but his brawn power. He usually has some money saved up in the bank or invested in the corporation. He is usually a small capitalist, in fact.

The only capitalistic class, as is pictured in the fervent labor editorials, consists of the heirs of rich men, the idlers, the gamblers and the criminals. The most of the people work in some way for a living. Most capitalists are laborers and most laborers are capitalists.

The whole trouble is that we have not learned how to get along together, how to eliminate strife and bad feeling and co-operate for the general good.

Strikes and lockouts, like wars, are simply stupid mistakes, based upon forms of mania that infect the population.

As H. G. Wells says, "A day will come when Labor Day will be a quaint and interesting anniversary, like fireworks in London, or beating the hounds of some old English borough."

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Let Science Talk English

HERE is something primarily only of technical interest which nevertheless should be of great usefulness to all readers of scientific books, articles and periodicals. It is a suggestion, made in Science, by Prof. Alfred C. Lane, of Tufts College.

It arises out of the continually increasing accumulation of new words constructed out of Greek roots, which have already become so numerous in scientific literature that, like a hedge of spine-bearing brush, they keep the general reader from penetrating the fast expanding forests of knowledge, which ought to contain only open and unobstructed aisles and vistas in which all may walk with understanding and delight. It is a simple fact that these technical terms are often far greater obstacles to the comprehension of scientific treatsies than any suppositious profundity of thought that they are assumed to contain.

Prof. Lane's suggestion, if acted upon, would at one stroke enormously reduce the quantity of technical brushwood at present encumbering the spread of scientific knowledge, and that without in any manner hampering the work of investigators. He would make one single short word, of Greek derivation, drive out a multitude of misformed hybrids, as ugly to the eye as they are to the ear, and that often puzzle Greek scholars themselves and send them to their dictionaries to try to find out just what the horrible compound was meant to signify.

The one magic wand-like word that Prof. Lane offers is "isontic," the meaning of which is "being equal, or equal to being." To see the application of it take the following words, now commonly used in scientific writing, beginning with the Greek prefix "iso:"

"Isotherm," meaning a line connecting points of equal temperature.

"Isobar," meaning a line connecting points under equal atmospheric pressure.

"Isogam," meaning a surface or line of equal gravitative attraction.

"Isochlor," meaning a line connecting points where water contains an equal amount of chlorin, etc.

There is a long list of such words, and all that the uninformed reader can guess is that (as the prefix "iso" shows) something is affirmed about equality, but to what the equality applies he can find out only by searching a Greek-English dictionary.

Now let us see how Prof. Lane's "isontic" clears up the situation and drives off the mists arising from the spot in which the word-mongers boil their linguistic roots. "Isontic" is intended to apply to any line or surface drawn through points that are equal in some respect. Thus, says the inventor of this important tone word. One could then speak of a "gravitation isontic," meaning thereby the curve connecting all points where the force of gravitation had the same value or a "sodium isontic" in the ocean, connecting points where the sea water has the same per cent of sodium; of an "evaporation isontic," or a "radium isontic," and so one would not have to use a long phrase or some queer hybrid, or have to hunt up some Greek equivalent which might not be familiar.

Good! Let us have this word, and by its means save our English speech from bristling like a hedgehog with the spines of a dead language.

Los Angeles vs. New York

THE fabulous growth of the Pacific Coast continues. It is evidenced by the continued increase in post-office receipts in Los Angeles. These receipts have run as follows in the first six months of recent years:

1925	$3,952,191.14
1926	4,200,353.49
1927	4,674,146.26
1928	4,916,535.80

It is true that the breakneck pace of new building in Los Angeles has slackened somewhat from the fabulous figure of $200,000,000 in 1923. But in the first six months of this year, building permits there amounted to $52,000,000, which is more than the assessed valuation (land and buildings together) of any one of the following American cities: Dubuque, Elmira, Fitchburg, Galveston, Little Rock, Macon, Mobile or Raleigh.

Los Angeles is growing, and yet, if you want to see REAL growth, take a look at the figures of New York City. In the single year of 1927 New York had $880,000,000 of new building, which is more than the building permits of Los Angeles during 1927 and the five previous years. And New York's 1927 building was $100,000,000 below its 1926 figures!

Set Yourself a Goal

HOW close are you to the goal you have set to reach by this time?

Or did you establish an objective?

If not, you have not made much advancement.

Without an object in mind it is unusual for a person to put his full powers to work.

So far you have drifted with no particular incentive.

You know what this system has done for you.

Why don't you wake up and try another one?

Think about what you would like to accomplish by a year from now.

Then set about it, with enthusiasm, energy and system.

Spasmodic efforts do not amount to much.

It is the day after day, regular, unfailing effort that counts.

Don't form the habit of dawdling.

You have never been systematic enough, so you don't know how much can be done by having an objective and making yourself keep in line.

It will not be easy, but nothing worth while is gained without effort and sacrifice.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

A Red Leaf

TODAY I saw a red leaf drifting down,
The first to fall from summer's glowing crown.
My heart grew heavy for a little space
And sudden shadow touched that sunlit place;
Too soon, too soon the wreath of summer dies,
Too fast, too fast time's wheel, relentless, flies!
Then, fragrant, gay, came memories of spring,
The daisies' gold, the blue-jay's flashing wing;
Ah, when was spring one whit, one thought less fair
Because of autumn, with her branches bare?

Isn't It So?

Great Passages from the Bible

David's Great Sin

(II. Samuel 12; 1-13)

AND the Lord sent Nathan unto David. And he came unto him, and said unto him, There were two men in one city; the one rich, and the other poor.

The rich man had exceeding many flocks and herds:

But the poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up: and it grew up together with him, and with his children; it did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own cup, and lay in his bosom; and was unto him as a daughter.

And there came a traveller unto the rich man, and he spared to take of his own flock and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that was come unto him; but took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.

And David's anger was greatly kindled against the man; and he said to Nathan, As the Lord liveth, the man that hath done this thing shall surely die:

And he shall restore the lamb fourfold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity.

And Nathan said to David, Thou art the man. Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul;

And I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things.

Wherefore hast thou despised the commandment of the Lord, to do evil in his sight? thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon.

Now therefore the sword shall never depart from thine house; because thou hast despised me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife.

And David said unto Nathan, I have sinned against the Lord. And Nathan said unto David, The Lord also hath put away thy sin; thou shalt not die.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

YOU'VE heard about the guy that tried to stop drinking, but maybe this was a different guy. Anyhow, the doctor told him he could stop if he'd just take something to eat every time he felt like taking a drink. So he did, and he got terrible fat and got to be a nuisance at everybody's house, asking for sandwiches and crackers.

So one day this guy was at a house party, and somebody got a little confused and fell out of a window on the third floor. The abstainer looked out the window and saw the accident. He got terrible pale and stumbled down stairs. He yelled at the hostess, "Say, Jane Balsm just fell out the window on her head. Get me a sirloin steak rare, smothered in onions, and some French fried potatoes, quick!"

Worse

JOHN BASSETT MOORE one of the judges of The Hague International Court, the day of his departure, discussed the innumerable American divorces that are obtained in Paris.

"It's bad, but it might be worse," he ended. "For instance, I once heard a magistrate say to a witness: "'Do I understand the plaintiff is a relative of yours?'

"The witness answered:

"'Yes, your honor; by bigamy.'"

Cricket Tragedy

THE batsman walked pompously to the wicket, surveyed the crowd loftly, had the sight screen moved, patted the pitch, adjusted his cap, hitched up his trousers, patted the turf again, and dug himself in.

The bowler sent down a simple ball which shattered the stumps, and the batsman slowly returned to the pavilion.

"'Ard luck, sir!" came a voice from the crowd. "Just as you was getting set!"

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

GO into any drug store in New York in the morning to get orange juice, coffee, or what you want, and you will see lined up along the soda counter, pretty young women drinking—bromo seltzer!

Before prohibition they didn't need so much resuscitating.

And one lady who saw it said: "Yes—but what does it mean?"

Women are NOT "all alike."

An employer, especially pleased with the efforts of a young woman who worked in his business, offered her, as a bonus, her choice of a fine dog or a trip to Paris. Believe it or not, she took the dog, and it cost $5,000.

The trip to Paris would have been over in no time, and the dog is still her faithful companion.

There are more tea cups than there is tea, which is why Mabel Willebrandt has such a busy life.

Considering that the girls are thin and getting thinner, and that their clothes are nil and getting nil-er, they should change the number of people permitted to ride in elevators. Twenty could very easily step in where 10 used to be a full house. In summer when they wear sandals instead of shoes three more could be accommodated in each life load.

California girls boast that they lead the nation when it comes to finding husbands.

That everlasting sunshine makes optimists of them all.

And their divorce record? That's probably just as good. Maybe better.
